Personality

Sunset is a very capable cat. Able to take assignments and accomplish them with relative ease. This always makes his ego though, as he is a very prideful cat. Due to this he is often isolated from others, and in general just very antisocial because of his past upbringings.

Despite that, he can be very understanding to others he is close with. Oftentimes hearing out their worries, even if he is bad at comforting them. Sunset is also a very ambitious cat, having large goals he wants to achieve in life before his time is up. For that he is a very attention-seeking cat due to his upbringing as well.

History

Lamb Life

Sunset's young life was rough to him. He was born into a litter; Daisy and Sunrise being born, and with not many being born in their generation he was thriving off the attention. Oftentimes he would rough house with his littermates or an older cat for fun. And they didn't seem to mind much, or at least he thought that until he noticed he would get a scolding by Fey for making fun of Wheater's lack of muscles whenever he tried to play with the older cat. He was just copying what his mother did though? What was so wrong about that? Sunset noticed when he would do such things his mother would laugh along with him and try to get him out of trouble. He figured if he continued to do this she would give him more attention just like the others used to do. And besides he had Sunrise! Daisy never seemed interested in doing this with him, but it's whatever.

When the time came for their training as Lambs, Sunset had pushed Sunrise into training as Guardians with him. While he flourished under his mothers training, he could tell Sunrise was struggling a lot with keeping up. And it all culminated when Sunrise had requested to switch his training to become a Grazer. Sunset was hurt, they were supposed to do these things together! Yet, Sunrise seemed more capable of doing more things dealing with helping others than protecting..and he figured that they could always hang out after their training. Yet after this training seemed to get harder for him, as his littermate Daisy had just started their Dreamer training; meaning Sunset felt like he was lacking in whatever talent they had. He tried to push himself to do more, which earned him a couple of injuries out of it. Yet, he was determined to finish his training and earn his mothers praises. Those praises never did happen though.

Troubling Start

After he became a full blown Guardian, he dedicated his time to spending it with his brother, no matter how many times his tellings of being nicer to Snipe he had to hear. Some of the cats said it was because he would make a "great Shepherd" or something like that. It only really drove him further onto reaching his goals, not wanting to be outdone by some average cat. Yet the trouble never stops, as soon Obsidian had given birth to Lunaris and Solaris. To him it just meant more competition in the running for Shepherd. He felt envious of the newest litter, especially since they're shown more love than his mother ever really gave him or his littermates.

After their previous Shepherd passed, Skunkie took over the role. To Sunset this meant that he had a chance at becoming the next Shepherd if he proved himself capable. Yet how was he supposed to steal the attention onto him when their Shepherd wasn't really there! He gets the grief, yet it's ridiculous. Especially since he isn't even really present for his own children. He felt like he would be able to make a sort of connection with the litter because of that, after all Sunrise and Daisy were able to make more friends. Why couldn't he? He talked with Solaris, and despite Sunset's more abrasive and prideful personality he was able to make good friends with Solaris. Even was able to give some form of comfort when their mother mysteriously left (despite how bad he is at that).

Everything seemed to go downhill, and Sunset wishes to go back to those good times. Their mother was pregnant with another litter. And while the colony was excited, they were also confused. How would she be able to have another litter? Many hushed whispers talked about how Skunkie would be the father; and even though at first he thought it was a great opportunity to get closer to the Shepherd all Sunset could feel was irritation and anger. Especially with how much it seemed like his mother was putting more care into this new cat more than her current litter when he was still a lamb.

Her name was Nova. Everycat could tell it was Skunkie's even before Lunaris' outburst. Yet they just had to keep living like it was normal. He hated it. Sunrise would try to get him and Skunkie's first litter to play with her but he outright refused. He even felt pity for the quiet Lunaris', as she was a Grazer who had to help with the Lambs after a certain time period. He tried his best to avoid it all, which is hard when your mother is the head Guardian. To make it even worse Nova took up training to become a Guardian herself. Oftentimes he would butt heads with her, falling back onto the teasing he would do as a Lamb, which didn't end well for anybody.

A Pathway Forward

After a while they ran into two outsiders. Very boisterous personalities, yet their Shepherd found their information to be useful. And as they tagged along they soon became part of this group. This led them onto this wide hillrange, where lots of grass-grazers were. He thought this would be his chance to define his achievements to Skunkie, no matter how mad he felt towards him, so that he may be able to become the next Shepherd.
