Matt has a three gallon unmarked container, a five gallon unmarked container and an unlimited supply of root beer. How can he use them to measure out 4 gallons of root beer?

Fill the five gallon container, pour from the five gallon into the three gallon until the three gallon is full. Dump the 3 gallons onto the floor. Pour the 2 gallons that are left in the 5 gallon container into the 3 gallon container. Fill the 5 gallon all the way with root beer, fill the three (that still would have two gallons in it) gallon all the way with root beer from the five gallon container which would take one gallon from the five gallons. $5-1=4$ so there would be four gallons left in the five gallon container.
