FACILITATOR NOTES

This lesson encourages students to use Khan Academy to review for the SAT exam. Before class, take time to familiarize yourself with the site and how students can access it.

For students who have limited access to the internet over the summer, share short lists of recommended SAT review books, bring in a few copies for students to borrow, or direct students to the regional office or library to borrow books.

Do Now: PSAT Reflection Students reflect on their past performance on the PSAT (or other related standardized test).		Notes:
Slide 2 5 min	TALKING POINTS Please answer the questions on your worksheet and be prepared to share out. - How did you feel about taking the PSAT or other practice tests? - What seems to be the most difficult part for you (math, reading, time management, etc.)?

Learn & Engage: SAT Study Plan Students create an SAT study plan.		Notes:
Slide 3 1 min	Have a student read the key takeaway.
Slide 4 2 min	TALKING POINTS - The SAT is an important part of your college application process. - Some schools you'll apply to will require you to submit your SAT score, so you want to make sure you put your best foot forward. - Even for those that don't require you to submit an SAT score, being able to submit may give you a leg up on other applicants. - It serves as another way for schools to learn about you as a student. - For example, you may have struggled with grades in freshman and sophomore year, which pulled down your GPA. While you have worked to get your grades up, your GPA still may not be as strong as it could have been, and it may not reflect the student you are today. - A strong performance on the SAT can communicate to colleges that your GPA reflects more who you were than who you are now as a student. It shows them that you are capable of hard work and growth. - A strong score on the SAT can also open up opportunities for you like specialty programs or scholarships. Some schools as well as some independent organizations offer merit-based scholarships connected to your SAT score.
Slide 5	TALKING POINTS

22 min	• Since you have already taken the PSAT or SAT, you have information on how you did. If you have not yet received that information, you will soon. • This information can help you make a thoughtful plan for raising your score and showing your best self when you take it again in your senior year. • Khan Academy is a great tool for helping you study. It helps identify what you need to work on and aligns content and questions with your score on your previous exam. • You can also use it to set up a study schedule for yourself that you can then share with your mentor. IF STUDENTS ALREADY HAVE KHAN ACADEMY ACCOUNTS: • Direct participants to log into their Khan Academy accounts. • Students should verify that their College Board accounts are linked to their Khan Academy accounts. • Then direct students to use the information derived from their test data to create a study schedule for the summer. IF STUDENTS DO NOT HAVE KHAN ACADEMY ACCOUNTS: • Have students create an account and link it to their College Board accounts. • Students should use the handout to create a study schedule.
Slide 6 Mentor Connection	TALKING POINTS Now let's write to our mentors.

Overview

Students are more likely to prepare for and perform better on standardized tests that they view as purposeful and valuable. Today, your mentee learned and reviewed the value of the SAT with regards to their postsecondary goals. Then, your mentee reviewed resources and tools they can utilize. With their study plan and the resources, they will be able to raise their score and feel more confident in taking the SAT.

We encourage students to use Khan Academy for SAT prep. Here, they can create a study schedule that is tailored to their needs and have access to free test prep.

If your mentee is not using Khan Academy, there are many companies that produce SAT study books. The College Board and Barron's, for example, produce a new book each year. Select one to recommend to your mentee to get from the library or regional program office.

The more invested you are in encouraging your mentee to study, the more effective your mentee will be!
