Introduction

Introduction must contain background, state of the art as a statement of the updated of an article, and research problem or hypothesis. At the end of introduction, the purpose of the research has to be stated. In scientific article format, it may not contain observation as well as research report, but it is written in state of the art to show the scientific update of the article. The full manuscript consist of 5000 – 7500 words (including abstract and references).

Literature Review

The literature review represents previous research in the research topic discussed and also the theoretical core of an article. The purpose of a literature review is to “look again” (re + view) at what other researchers have done regarding a specific topic. Literature review serves to identify knowledge gaps found by the author when conducting a literature review and builds theoretical explanations that answer research questions and objectives. In this case, the articles listed must be articles that were published not earlier than 10 years.

Theoretical Framework

Theoretical framework is a systematic way to arrange science. Science has some parts, theory, fact, phenomena, and concept.

Research Method

The methods used in research completion are written in this part. The research method used in problem solving is categorized as analysis method. Research methods consist of data topology, data collection method, data analysis, and data visualization.

Result and Discussion

Result and explanation contain findings of the research and scientific explanation. Scientific findings which acquired from result of a research also require reliable data. The scientific findings are not the data from the research. The scientific findings should be explain scientifically from; is the finding scientific? Who could it occur? Why does the variable trend happen? All those questions should be explained scientifically, not only descriptively, but also supported by capable scientific phenomenon. Moreover, it should explain it's difference to other researchers' result which topics are related. The result and finding should answer the hypothesis in introduction.

Conclusion

Conclusion describes the answer of the hypothesis and/or the purpose of the research or the scientific finding acquired. Conclusion does not state repetition of result and explanation, but it is specifically about the conclusion of the finding which was aimed in purpose or hypothesis. If it possible, at the end of conclusion, we may write things which will be done related to the next concept of the research.

Bibliography

All the references which refer in the article must be listed in bibliography. Bibliography should contain references from premier sources (scientific journal and contain at least 80% of whole bibliography). It must be published not earlier than 10 years. Each article contain at least 15 reference bibliographies. The citation style used in this article is American Psychological Association (APA) Style 7th edition. We recommend the authors to use Zotero or Mendeley!
