

Easter

Kathryn Blackmore

Easter is a meaningful holiday for Christians because it celebrates the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Easter is considered the most significant event in Christian theology because it represents the victory over sinning and death, which promotes the belief of eternal life. Jesus' resurrection was believed to have occurred in the 1st century AD. Easter is celebrated on the first Sunday following the first full moon after the vernal equinox, so it always occurs between March 22nd and April 25th.

Easter traditions have evolved over time blending different cultures and Christian traditions. For example dyeing eggs is symbolic because it is from the pre-Christian springtime festivals and transformed into a symbol of Jesus' resurrection. The Easter Bunny was from German folklore where a bunny was believed to lay eggs for children to find. As well, there are many Easter parades such as the one in New York City, and lots of people wear fancy clothes and colorful hats.

Today Easter is celebrated globally with church services, festive meals, egg hunts, and parades. While its religious significance remains crucial for many it is also a time for family gatherings and Spring celebrations for some. I hope everyone has a great Easter and eats some lamb!
