Garage Door Manufacturers - Which Company Should Developers Deal With

Whether you are looking at replacing your residential garage door, building a custom home with a three-car garage, or are looking at a development of multiple homes in a new sub-division, you'll want to look at a few garage door manufacturers so that you find the best one for your needs. What should you consider when looking at garage door manufacturers for a large project with multiple doors needed, such as with a new housing development? Here are some helpful tips:

Garage Door Manufacturers' Reputation

Will the quality of the garage door stand up and benefit your own reputation when you sell the new homes? Whether you're using the same company for the front door, back door, garage doors, and the interior doors, or want someone to do the garage alone, you'll want someone with a very good reputation, particularly if you are showcasing the homes as a high quality project from a respected home builder. Look for a reputation of great workmanship and attention to detail when deciding on which manufacturer to deal with.

Carefully consider the type of doors you use based on several factors. Will you offer an insulated or non-insulated door? Is the development happening in a particularly rough weather area? Weather resistant doors are important for looks but would you like to put in your brochure that your doors are also ideal for areas that are prone to hurricanes and tornados? These details can help you sell and help you justify your sales price. You may also offer a basic door with the potential for an upgrade. If your project is large enough, you'll be able to get spec sheets to give to prospective clients and may be able to get a great deal including samples for your model home and your color charts.

Price

Pricing is going to be important to you, particularly if you have many doors to buy. You'll want to negotiate for dealer / contractor pricing and /or volume pricing if you are buying quite a few doors. Buying everything at once is often the best plan of action.

Warranty

Warranty will be important to your buyers as well. Knowing there is a good warranty on various parts of their new house will add to the curb appeal and justify the pricing further. The door seal might not be under warranty but the springs might be. Choose garage door makers carefully and make warranty of the door and the door's parts part of that equation as this will help you with your advertising as well.

Ease of Doing Business

You need to keep a schedule and you need to stay on budget. So, choose companies to deal with that make both easy for you. Timely deliveries, great customer service, and predictable billing might all be important to you so look carefully at your options for the garage door as well as all the other items you have to procure for the project.
