Some historical context for the haftarah

The word haftarah comes from the Hebrew root meaning to close or depart. The haftarah is read following the Torah reading on Shabbat mornings. In addition, a haftarah is read on the Festivals of Passover, Shavuot, Sukkot and on the High Holidays--Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

A haftarah is also read on the afternoons of all public fast days including Yom Kippur.

The origins of the custom of reading the haftarah are unknown though several theories have been offered. One suggests that haftarot were read in response to the theological disputes between the Jewish community and the Samaritans who do not accept the canonicity of any books of the Tanakh beyond the book of Joshua. A second theory, widely taught but without historical support is that the practice was instituted in 168 B.C.E. just before the Maccabean revolt when reading the Torah was forbidden. A third theory suggests that haftaroth were read after a synagogue or community's Torah scrolls were destroyed.

Though the precise origin has been lost to history, the practice is noted in the Christian New Testament as well.

Unlike the annual or triennial Torah reading cycles which are fixed, haftaroth vary between and within communities. Typically, there is a link between the haftarah for a given Shabbat and the Torah portion. That link can often be small, abstract or tenuous.

At other times, the haftarah is thematically linked to a period of time on the Jewish calendar.

גמ' תנו רבנן: בפסח קורין בפרשת מועדות ומפטירין בפסח גלגל, והאידנא דאיכא תרי יומי, יומא קמא — בפסח גלגל, ולמחר — בפסח יאשיהו.

GEMARA: The Sages taught in a baraita: On the first day of Passover, the congregation reads from the portion of the Festivals (Leviticus 22:26–23:44), and they read as the *haftara the account of the Passover celebrated at Gilgal (Joshua 5:2–14). The Gemara comments: And nowadays, in the Diaspora, when there are two Festival days of Passover, on the first day they read as the haftara the account of the Passover celebrated at Gilgal, and on the next day they read from the account of the Passover observed by Josiah (II Kings 23).

יום טוב האחרון של פסח קורין "וייהי בשלח", ומפטירין "וידבר דוד". ולמחר "כל הבכור", ומפטירין "עוד היום"...

The baraita continues: On the last Festival day of Passover, they read the portion of “And it came to pass, when Pharaoh let the people go” (Exodus 13:17–15:26), because it includes the account of the splitting of the Red Sea, and they read as the *haftara the portion “And David spoke” (II Samuel 22), which is the song of David. And in the Diaspora, on the next day, the eighth day of Passover, they read the portion “All the firstborns” (Deuteronomy 15:19–16:17), and they read as the *haftara the portion of “This very day” (Isaiah 10:32–12:6), because it discusses the downfall of Sennacherib, which occurred on the night of Passover.

בַּעֲצֶרֶת “שְׁבַעַת שְׁבוּעוֹת”, וּמִפְטִירֵין בְּחִבְקֻיָּק. אַחֲרֵים אוֹמְרִים: “בַּחֲדָשׁ הַשְּׁלִישִׁי”, וּמִפְטִירֵין בְּמֶרְכָּבָה. וְהָאֵידְנָא... דְּאִיכָא תַרִּי יוֹמִי, עֶבְדִּין כְּתִירוֹיָהּ וְאִיכָא.

The baraita continues: On *Shavuot they read the portion of “Seven weeks,” and they read as the haftara from Habakkuk, chapter 2, since it mentions the giving of the Torah at Sinai. Others say: They read the portion of “In the third month” (Exodus 19:1–20:23), which describes the giving of the Torah, and they read as the *haftara from the account of the Divine Chariot (Ezekiel 1). The Gemara comments: And nowadays, in the Diaspora, when there are two days of Shavuot, we act in accordance with both opinions, but in the reverse order. On the first day they read the portion of “In the third month,” and on the second day they read the portion of “Seven weeks.”

בְּרֵאשׁ הַשָּׁנָה: “בַּחֲדָשׁ הַשְּׁבִיעִי”, וּמִפְטִירֵין: “הִבֵּן יְקִיר לִי אֶפְרַיִם”. וְיֵשׁ אוֹמְרִים: “וְהָ פָקֵד אֶת שָׂרָה”, וּמִפְטִירֵין בְּחֻנָּה.

The baraita continues: On Rosh HaShana they read the portion of “On the seventh month on the first of the month” (Numbers 29:1–6) and they read as the *haftara “Is Ephraim My dear son?” (Jeremiah 31:1–20), as it contains the verse: “I earnestly remember him still,” which recalls God’s love for His people. And some say that they read “And the Lord visited Sarah” (Genesis 21), which describes how God blessed her that she should have a child, and, according to tradition, God blessed her on Rosh HaShana. And they read as the *haftara from the account of Hannah (I Samuel 1:1–2:10), who, according to tradition, was also blessed on Rosh HaShana that she should have a child. ...

וְרַבָּה וְרַב יוֹסֵף דְּאָמְרִי תַרְוִיָּהּ: הָאֵי סֵפֶר אֶפְטָרֶתָא – אָסוּר לְמַקְרִי בֵּיהּ בְּשַׁבָּת. מָאי טַעְמָא? דְּלֹא נִיתֵן לִכְתֹּב.

And Rabba and Rav Yosef both say: It is prohibited to publicly read the haftara, the portion from the Prophets that is read after the weekly Torah portion, on Shabbat, from a scroll containing only the haftarot. What is the reason for this? It is because this type of scroll may not be written, as the words of the Prophets must also be written as complete books.
