Introduction (Segoe UI, 12, Bold)

The article should be between 4000–6000 words. [Segoe UI, 12, 1.15 spacing]. Paragraphs are typed with justified settings. Between chapter titles, subchapters with paragraphs below and between paragraphs are spaced or spacing 6 pt.

The required writing sequence is; Introduction contains background; research objectives and problem solving plan. The problem solving is linked to the relevant literature review and hypothesis development is included in this section as the basis for the direction of problem solving, not included in a separate subchapter.

In an effort to improve the quality of the article, the author is encouraged to utilize the results of the literature review to support the argumentation, both in the introduction (the need for research to be carried out) and in the discussion (compared to the findings of previous research / existing theories) from relevant journals as much as 80% of the entire bibliography used.

Method (Segoe UI, 12, Bold)

Research methods explain the design of activities, scope or object, main materials and tools, place, data collection techniques, operational definitions of research variables, and analysis techniques.

Concisely describe the research methods used. If there are methods that are not commonly used, they must be described in detail. The procedures used in the research can be described in the form of flow charts, pictures or other diagrams that support.

In writing use a direct and concise style. Avoid complex and ambiguous sentences. Briefly define all technical terms that may not be familiar to the reader. Explain abbreviations used at the outset. E.g.: Problem Based Learning (PBL).

Table

Tables must be described in the body. Tables should be in a smaller font size than the body. Tables use only horizontal borders at the top, bottom and column heading borders, with no vertical borders (see Table 1). The table title is above the table, using Segoe UI 10, hanging at 1.5 cm.

Results and Discussion (Segoe UI, 12, Bold)

This section presents the research results. Research results can be supplemented with tables, graphs (images), and/or charts. The discussion section presents the results of data processing, interprets the findings logically, and relates them to relevant reference sources. Try to be as concise and comprehensive as possible. The discussion should focus on the results and how these results can answer the problems raised.

Received: references in parentheses (author name, year). Give all authors' names; us Accepted: where are more than three authors. Papers that have never been pu Published: if they have been submitted for publication, should be written as "ui tations. Papers that have been accepted for publication should be cit s". In the title of the paper, the first letter of each word should be capitalized except for conjunctions, prepositions of less than seven letters, and prepositional phrases.

Each citation is written in a specific way that can be identified as a different "quote" from your original text. At the end of each quotation, you should put reference(s) in the Iqtisad Journal footnote style, i.e. Chicago Manual Style 17th Edition. A reference should also be put at the end of every quotation that cites ideas from someone's work. If the quotation is taken from a book, it should be like this,¹ and the next quote goes like this.² Books with volume,³ cited in the next note.⁴ Please note that footnote reference numbers are placed after (not before) any punctuation. Citations from earlier references, but not mentioned later, are noted like this.⁵ Simply state the author's last name and the version sorted by the title of the work.

Examples of references other than books are papers in journals⁶ or this journal articles,⁷ or website,⁸ magazines and newspapers,⁹ reports,¹⁰ book chapters,¹¹ theses,¹² and dissertations.¹³ Provide the full internet url whenever available along with the access date (see footnote 8). Use primary references (Journals) as much as 80% of the entire reference list used.

Conclusion (Segoe UI, 12, Bold)

This section presents the main conclusions of the study. They should be presented in concise, clear, and compact sentences based on the results and discussions in the form of paragraphs (not with bullet points or numbering); clarify the findings of the study as a synthesis of the results of the data analysis and discussion; and highlight original findings that contribute to the development of the Islamic Law, and Islamic Customary Law. May also be included recommendations for the next author.
