TAP WINE

About our Tap Wines

I don't know who it was who said "life is too short to drink bad wine" but I'd like to buy them a pint.

Wine is important and getting the wine right in a pub, in fact in life generally, is worth the effort. House wines in a pub are especially a test of the quality and style of the place you're in and we like them to be easy drinking, not too expensive and of excellent quality.

It is this mission that led us down the route of importing our own wine. We get to choose exactly the wine we want, we can import it in bulk and sell it in good old-fashioned carafes. This makes it much cheaper for our customers than it would be if we asked a UK-based importer to do the job for us. It's a bit of a win/win all round.

This is exactly what we have done. We don't want to give away too many of our secrets but essentially, we have a top-flight buyer working with us together with a French négociant who has sourced, blended, and packaged the wine for us. We have also devised and installed our own dispense system which you may have noticed on our back bar.

Cheers!
