

More Bad News and The Golden Ratio

Kylie Jenner headed to her office contemplating the direction of her UCC stable. 2024 had not been a banner year. After starting out strong with a 23-7 record at UCC XXV in Japan, the year seemed promising. Even with a slight dip, going 22-8 at UCC XXVI in Columbia, the stable's trajectory looked positive. However, things took a turn for the worse as the Barbies struggled with the heat and humidity at UCC XXVII in Miami, finishing with a 17-13 record and losing three titles to the unstoppable party girls over at Amped.

Sin City Slugfest V was another bitter pill for Kylie Jenner to swallow, especially considering she herself sponsored the event. Her fighters laced up their gloves and went toe to toe with the best boxers in the UCC. When the event concluded, the Barbies had a dismal 5-11 record, with most of their losses coming against their hated rivals. This added another setback in what had already been a challenging year for the stable.

Brawls with the Awesome Aries and the Lost Wildcats didn't fare well for the Barbies either, with many fighters sustaining injuries and losing their favorite bikini tops. The Wannabees proved to be a persistent thorn in Kylie's side, particularly the fiery redhead Francesca Capaldi. The talented powerhouse backed up her taunts with her fists at Sin City Slugfest V, where she knocked out Victoria Justice, Dove Cameron, Joey King, and Madison Beer. Her reign in the ring was only halted by a heroic comeback from Kristen Stewart. This added to the series of setbacks Kylie Jenner's stable faced throughout a challenging year.

Kylie Jenner suffered another major setback when she lost her top recruit, Leni Klum, to Hellfire Girls Club, who signed the once-in-a-lifetime talent right from under her nose. Although a lawsuit filed in International Court yielded compensation in the form of veteran fighters Victoria Justice and Emily Ratajkowski, the loss of Leni, Taylor Swift, and Kelli Berglund left many Barbies feeling slighted as they lost good friends and teammates. This further compounded the struggles Kylie's stable faced, making it a challenging year both in and out of the ring.

Olivia Dunne also played her hand and demanded a trade as interest in the Collegiate Gymnast reached a fevered pitch. A meeting with Death by Bikini associate Tyra Banks opened the door for a possible deal but Kylie's over-reaction may have put any sort of trade in jeopardy.

2024 was also a challenging year for the Barbies as their top fighter, Dove Cameron, switched to the Featherweight Division after losing five consecutive Lightweight Title matches to Death by Bikini Lioness Vita Sidorkina. Before these losses, Dove had spent 14 straight months as the top fighter in the UCC.

However, after her encounters with Vita, Dove found herself struggling in the top 50, far from any hopes of another Lightweight title shot. This move and the subsequent downturn in Dove's performance further exemplified the difficulties Kylie Jenner's stable faced throughout the year.

Kendall Jenner also saw her Middleweight title and her 21 fight win streak snapped. She regained the title against Marina Diamandis only to lose it again in Miami.

Kylie Jenner felt that another special event might help snap her stable out of the slump they were in. After considering options from her fighters, she decided to sponsor The Baby Oil Brawl event at the world-famous Whiskey a Go Go. Unfortunately, the event started off poorly for the Barbies. Kylie watched as her first four fighters lost in devastating fashion against their hated rivals. Madelaine Petsch lost her rubber match to former Barbie Katharine McNamara, and Victoria Justice saw her former bestie, Ariana Grande, make a comeback and win in sudden death. The event, intended to reinvigorate the stable, only added to their struggles.

Olivia Rodrigo made headlines when she was given an ultimatum after losing six out of her last seven fights. Although she managed to beat Haley Khalil, her struggles continued. Entering The Baby Oil Brawl where half of the UCC fighters wanted a piece of her. Olivia took on what she considered an easy win but ended up losing in sudden death to Wannabee Madison Pettis.

Following this, Camila Morrone, feeling slighted for not being chosen by Rodrigo, challenged Kylie Jenner. Kylie promptly refused the challenge and instead chose Madelyn Cline to fight as her proxy. Camila accepted, with the caveat that if she defeated Kylie's chosen fighter, Kylie herself would have to enter the oil pit.

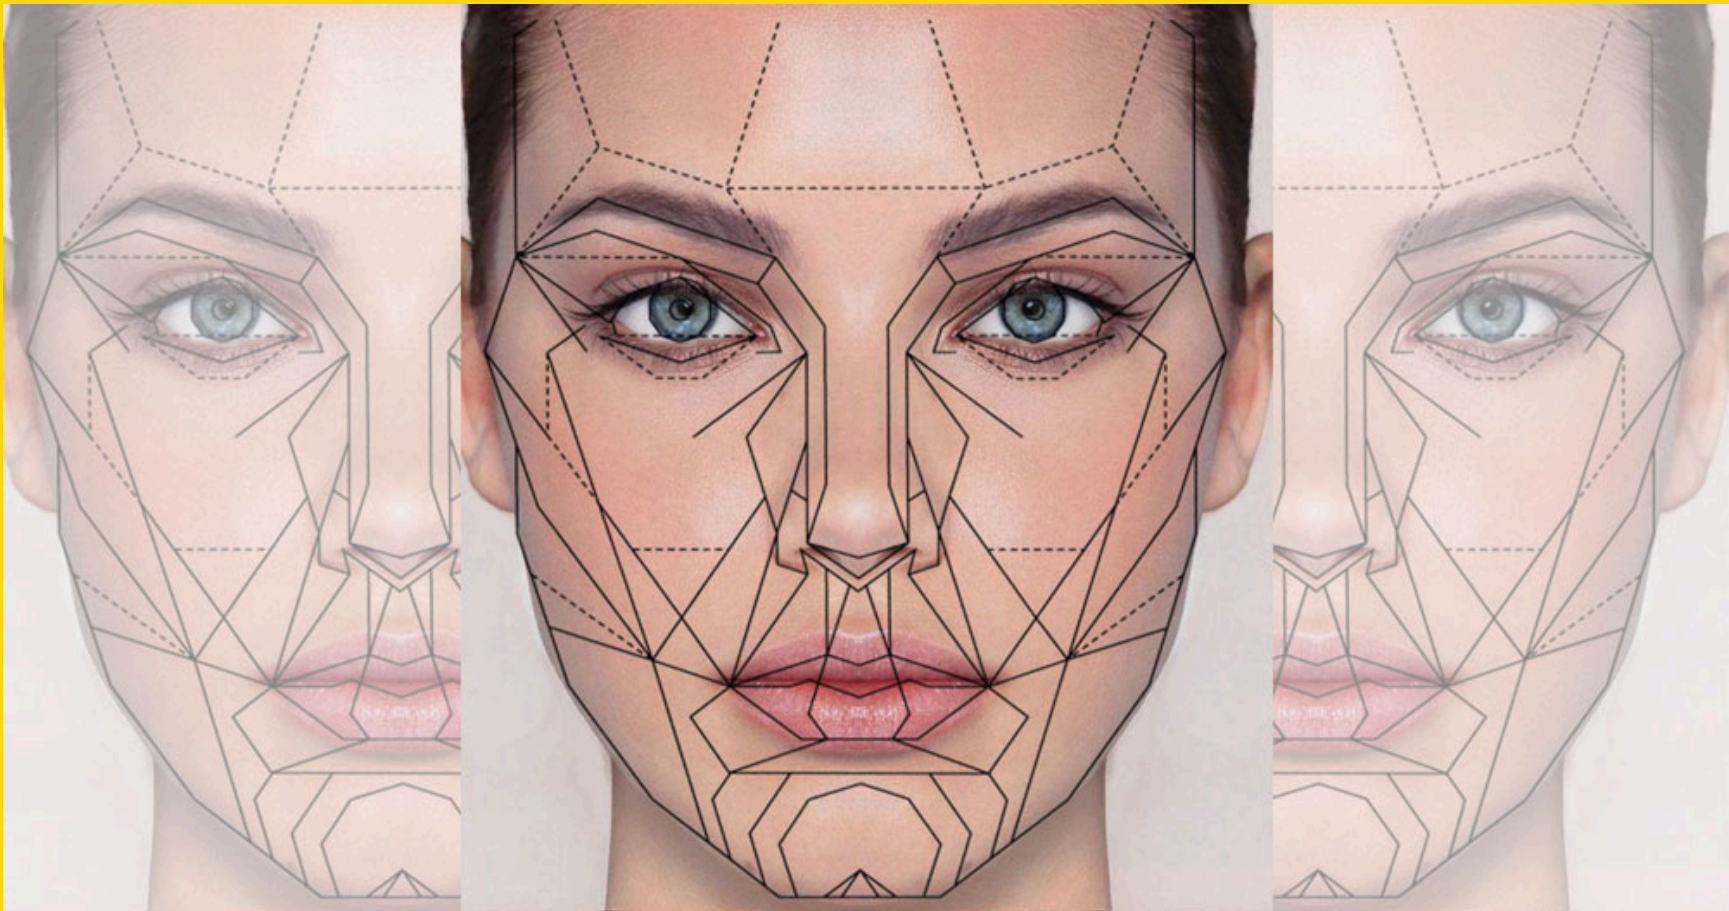

With her team down 0-4, Kylie knew she needed to set the tone. However, after two rounds, she found herself in a tight battle with the World of Fight Middleweight. It required a significant comeback to avoid dropping five straight matches at her own event. The pressure was on Kylie to turn the tide and inspire her team with a decisive victory.

The Golden Ratio

The Golden Ratio, approximately 1.618, is a mathematical ratio commonly found in nature, art, and architecture. It is derived from the Fibonacci sequence, a series of numbers where each number is the sum of the two preceding ones. This sequence often appears in natural growth patterns, such as the arrangement of leaves, the branching of trees, the spiral of shells, and even the proportions of the human body. The Golden Ratio is associated with beauty and harmony due to its frequent appearance in these natural forms and aesthetically pleasing designs.

Artists and architects have long utilized this ratio in their works, believing it creates a sense of balance and visual appeal. From the Parthenon in ancient Greece to Leonardo da Vinci's "Vitruvian Man" and Salvador Dalí's "The Sacrament of the Last Supper," the Golden Ratio has been a fundamental principle in achieving pleasing proportions and symmetry. Its presence in so many diverse areas underscores its universal appeal and enduring significance in both natural and human-made creations. approximately 1.618, is a mathematical ratio found in nature, art, and architecture.

In the context of female faces, the Golden Ratio is applied to determine proportions that are traditionally considered beautiful. Key facial landmarks are analyzed to see if they align with the Golden Ratio. For example, the length and width of the face, the distance between the eyes, the width of the nose, and the positioning of the lips all play a role in this assessment.

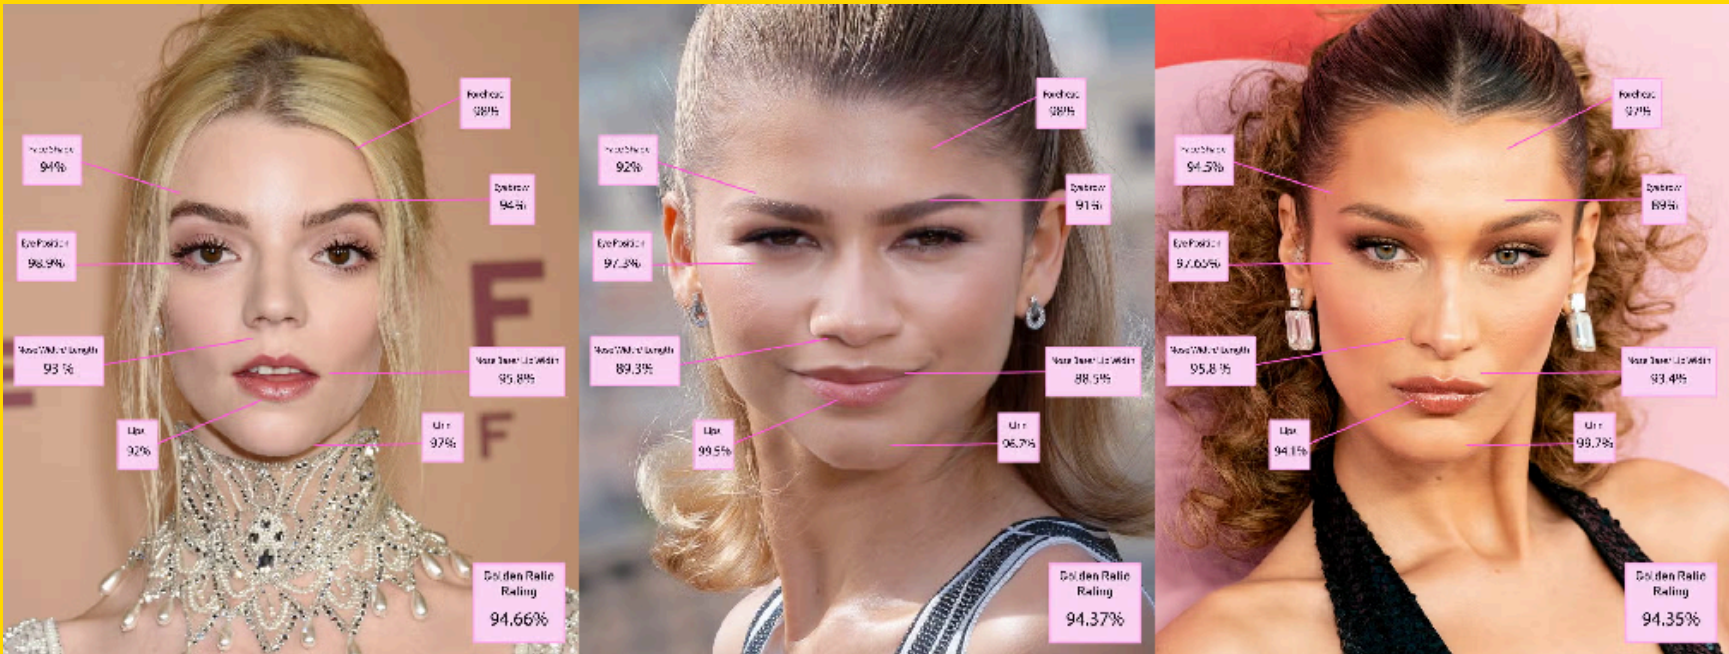

The Badass Barbies have consistently dominated the Golden Ratio rankings, holding the top spots for the past eight years. Bella Hadid, with an impressive score of 94.35, has been the leading face for the last four years.

Kendall Jenner and Megan Fox have also shared time at the top with Kendall reaching the pinnacle 2 times and Megan once. Former Barbies Amber Heard and Taylor Swift have also experienced time at the pinnacle of these beauty assessments.

Kylie sat at her desk scrolling through the new list for 2024. She felt that some good news would be coming her way as the Barbies were sure to place at the top again. As Kylie scrolled through the top 20 faces, she recognized many familiar names. Megan Fox, Kendall Jenner, Emma Watson, Emily Ratajkowski, Gigi Hadid, Hailee Steinfeld, Victoria Justice, and even Kylie herself all made the top 20. As she continued, she noticed that former Badass Barbie Margot Robbie held the 4th spot, with Bella Hadid dropping to 3rd. Kylie felt a bit anxious when she saw Zendaya Coleman in 2nd place then pondered which Barbie would win the title again.

When she finally reached the number 1 spot the smile disappeared and a look of disbelief took over. The number 1 face for 2024, according to the Golden Ratio was former Badass Barbie Training Squad Member Anya Taylor-Joy.

Science doesn't lie and with a .29 advantage, Anya Taylor Joy, one of the many upstart Hellfire Rookies, held the title of the most beautiful woman in the world. Kylie was happy for her former practice squad member but sad to see The Badass Barbie streak come to an end.

Kylie sent a giant bear made out of roses to Anya, congratulating her on her title and wishing her luck in the upcoming tournament. Now all Kylie had to figure out was how to get Anya back on the Barbies.

Drastic measures were needed to break her stable out of its current slump. The Baby Oil Brawl was an unmitigated disaster, and regaining the three titles they lost to Amped would have to wait until after the 9th Tournament Series.

Getting Olivia Dunne back into the gym was also a priority, as well as settling the score with the pesky Wannabees. Kylie knew that rejuvenating her stable required a comprehensive strategy. She planned to intensify training regimens and focus on both physical and mental conditioning.

Additionally, Kylie considered organizing internal matches to foster a competitive spirit and refine the fighters' techniques. Recruiting fresh talent and possibly re-signing past stars like Anya could inject new energy into the team. With careful planning and relentless effort, Kylie was determined to restore the Barbies to their former glory.

The Prettiest Woman in the World

Anya Taylor Joy