The Case for Forgotten Americans

By MrWhiteyisAwesome (R-DX)

Most American workers have been punched in the gut. How can we make sure they are not ignored?

You can look at a lot of places in America today and the first thought that comes to mind is “What happened” that is the thought many Americans think when they look at our cities,our manufacturing sector,our infrastructure and our neighborhoods. It will take a leader and quite frankly, many leaders that are not beholden to any donors,corporations or foreign interests. Sadly, for many decades we’ve had unchecked power go on in Washington while our country has been looted and pillaged.The first and most important thing is that our political class on both sides have cost this country millions of jobs. We’ve lost millions and millions of jobs in many sectors.

Manufacturing,energy,building and many more. If you take a look at Eastern Kentucky,West Virginia,Pennsylvania and other Appalachian states, you’ll see many small towns all across coal country that have been gutted and reduced to nothing but a shell of its former self. You can go to the rust belt and see shut down big beautiful buildings that sit empty that used to employ millions of Americans.

This has also correlated with China's economic rise, so have our political and corporate classes been taking Chinese bribes? It's hard to say but it's clear our so-called leaders on both sides have been taking this country down a path of decline while they have been getting rich and profited off of it. Washington D.C is one of richest and most expensive places to live in, but yet they produce nothing. While China and many other countries continue to smartly use coal and other fossil fuels, many on the left and a few on the right are trying to send our country off a cliff by advocating for anti-civilization energy policies also known as Netzero. China over the next few years is building more coal and gas fired power plants than the whole world and yet here we are killing off many jobs and whole industries. It seems like to me China is actively funding our decline and collapse, with the help of our leaders it appears to be.

Infrastructure is another thing that isn't like it used to be, if you go to another country, how many potholes do they have on their roads? I would bet none because there's no way they would put up with it. Folks, our roads and bridges and railroads in many cases are in a state of being obsolete. If our government spends four to six trillion dollars a year, where does it go? Clearly not to build and fix our infrastructure, it's insane to think a country that can manage to spend trillions a year while also being trillions in debt can't manage to somehow manage to improve our country, it just seems like we're a charity and they give it all away to god knows where.

Forgotten Americans are in desperate need for someone to hear their voices and their pleas and quite frankly, even many Republicans are tone deaf and don't listen to what their voters want and in many cases, they decide that they know what the voters want. While both political parties are ignorant to what these forgotten Americans want and how they feel, they have the strongest patriotic bones and want to save this country and they just need someone to take their mantle and run with it until everything they want is accomplished and everything they dislike is disintegrated into a total irrelevant state. It is clear that we need a massive clearing of the swamp in ways that people have probably never seen in their lifetimes. It's going to take someone who is strong minded and has what it takes to get the job done no matter the obstacles in the way. It won't be busy but we must bring to heel the out of control political class and anything else that isn't in the interest of our country and trust me, there are a lot of things that will be brought to heel if someone is brave enough and has the political and personal will to do it.
