00:16 to 00:41

So this is going well.

00:41 to 01:14

Don't remember reading a book?

I think he caught her in a lie.

01:43 to 01:59

Receipts on reparations!

02:00 to 02:27

Insane gaslighting.

02:27 to 03:15

Unwilling to condemn the insane coverage at NPR.

03:18 to 03:40

Really?

03:40 to 04:18

Misinformation.

Finally, his conclusion.

04:48 to 05:12

Uri Berliner: NPR Should Refuse to Take Federal Funds

The broadcaster needs to stop pretending it's a network for all of America, and become the progressive institution it truly wants to be.

By Uri Berliner

03.25.25 — Culture and Ideas

NPR says direct payments from the CPB and indirect federal funding through its member stations account for just 4 percent of annual revenues. That adds up to $13 million—a skimpy slice out of NPR's 2024 revenues of $336 million.

If it's not much of a gravy train, why the big fuss?

In short, NPR should drop the public from its mission statement and embrace the progressive. Don't try to conceal what everyone knows already.

Once it's acknowledged and out in the open, there's a place for advocacy journalism. And yes, there are tons of hard-hitting stories to cover about MAGA World and President Trump's heedless use of power.

NPR can still be a significant part of the American conversation, just without the federal support. It's time, NPR. Cut the cord.
