SMOOTH project focuses on active social inclusion and examines if the educational commons can operate as a catalyst to inverse inequalities in education. The project proposes an innovative action research programme, engaging children and youth reversing inequalities. It reinforces intercultural and intergenerational dialogue and social integration, develops essential social and personal skills for both children, youth, and adults, establishes spaces of democratic citizenship, and builds and supports the community through differences. SMOOTH also perform a cross-cutting and cross-disciplinary analysis of educational commons.
