

Welcome Back to Conservative College

- Professor Toto welcomes the students back to Conservative College after a three-class absence.
- The college is described as a place where the foundational principles of the Republic are taught.
- Professor Toto compares himself to the puppy from The Wizard of Oz, who exposes lies.
- Students are encouraged to grab their bean bag and show their Toto passport for admission.
- The professor is excited to discuss various topics but is unsure where to begin.
- Professor Toto greets and acknowledges several students.

Troubleshooting Technical Difficulties with Live Stream

- The narrator mentions that the video is still blurry and expresses uncertainty about what to do.
- They suggest trying something different to fix the issue and assure the audience that they will return.
- The volatility of the US dollar is discussed, along with the need for an alternative financial strategy.
- The narrator introduces the idea of investing in gold or silver as a means to build wealth and secure one's future.
- "God's money" is presented as a platform that offers rare, high-quality precious metals at competitive prices.
- The option of joining the "coin of the month" program is mentioned as a way to gradually invest in silver.
- The narrator expresses frustration with the technical difficulties and mentions a large viewership on Roku.
- They ask the audience to help spread the word about their return on social media platforms.
- Various attempts to fix the video quality issue are mentioned, with limited success.
- The narrator apologizes for the technical difficulties and mentions their plans to teach in the upcoming session.
- They make an adjustment to the video settings to reduce a pink tint on their face.
- The narrator expresses frustration and uncertainty about how to resolve the ongoing issues.

Notes on the provided text

- The author will be gone for a week due to Holy Week at their church.

- The author is happy to announce that they had the largest crowd in history, with people coming from Scotland, California, Michigan, and other places.
- They had a marvelous week and their lives were transformed.
- They are now preparing for the Feast of Shavuot or Pentecost on June 2nd.
- The author will also be gone in October for Toto's Retreat in Alabama.
- There have been bad storms and tornadoes in their area recently.
- They went to Texas to see an eclipse and had an amazing experience.
- The author loves their country but puts their religious experience first.
- They only take off twice a year for Passover and Tabernacles.
- They try to be present for all other times unless they are sick or have unforeseen circumstances.

Analysis of a Powerful Commercial and the Effects of Fame and Criticism

- The text discusses a new commercial released by the Trump campaign that the writer loves and wants to share with the readers.
- The commercial emphasizes that money can buy almost anything except immortality, which must be earned.
- The future is portrayed as an American story that Americans will love.
- When someone achieves greatness, they are praised and built up by others, turning them into something larger than life.
- However, there is a predictable pattern where people are eventually torn down and exposed, leading to betrayal, humiliation, and loneliness.
- The writer believes that it is during the descent from the height of fame that many individuals falter and break.
- Despite the hardships and pain, some people can find the will to fight on and rise again, while others cannot.
- The commercial poses the question of whether someone can maintain their resilience and continue to fight even when they are at their lowest point.
- The writer believes that the readers already know the answer, implying that they possess the strength to persevere.
- The text emphasizes the desire for greatness and the need to be a part of someone else's success and legacy.
- The writer mentions that the use of profanity in the commercial is unnecessary and detracts from its overall impact.
- The writer reflects on the commercial's message, expressing admiration for individuals like Donald Trump who can withstand criticism and remain faithful to their calling.
- The text concludes by stating that a person's story can inspire others to keep fighting and never give up, forming a lasting memory and legacy.

Public Apology by Professor Toto

- Professor Toto has always had control over what he says on the Toto show but is about to issue a public apology for the first time.
- Professor Toto is a comedic character created for political satire, but there is a line that should not be crossed even in comedy.
- Three weeks ago, during a show discussing Judge Koni, Professor Toto said something that crossed the line.
- Professor Toto acknowledges that his statement was inappropriate and should not have been said.
- The public apology is addressed to Professor Toto's audience, followers, haters, and the world at large.
- Professor Toto's wife remembers the specific show and agrees that a public apology is necessary.

Notes on Speech and Artificial Intelligence

- The speaker expresses criticism towards a federal judge named Canoni, whom they believe to be ignorant and stupid.
- The speaker acknowledges that their remarks were offensive and apologizes for any offense caused.
- They admit to making a personal reference to the judge's physical appearance, which they deem as completely unacceptable.
- The speaker thanks those who called them out on their offensive remarks, including their "haters on YouTube" and Owen fireside chat.
- They express their intention to learn from this experience and be more careful with their speech in the future.
- The speaker reiterates their negative opinion of the judge but states that her physical appearance should be off-limits for criticism.
- The speaker transitions to a new topic: artificial intelligence (AI).
- They claim that AI is essentially fake in nature, without providing further explanation or supporting details.

Artificial Intelligence and Joe Biden's Presidency

- The speaker wants to demonstrate how artificial intelligence is taking over the world.
- The mainstream media's artificial intelligence is mentioned as a starting point.
- Joe Biden's presidency is compared to Donald Trump's presidency, highlighting a contrast in job production.
- Joe Biden inherited a crisis and successfully navigated it, leading to a stronger economy.

- Manufacturing is returning, and there are investments in infrastructure and the environment.
- The speaker mentions a positive meeting with business leaders in the tech sector.
- The Republicans are portrayed as chaotic and focused on conflict rather than problem-solving.
- President Biden's leadership on the world stage has gained respect from allies and peers.
- Trend lines and polls indicate strong support for Biden.
- The more Donald Trump is in the public eye, the less support he gains.
- The hush money trial and being in a courtroom does not help Trump's image.
- The speaker disagrees with the idea that being in a courtroom is good for someone facing felony charges.

Artificial Intelligence and the Fear of Autocracy

- The numbers show a negative sentiment towards Donald Trump's presidency
- Americans have a tendency to romanticize the recent past but are now remembering the awfulness of Trump's presidency
- The speaker introduces the concept of artificial intelligence (AI) and its distinction from authentic intelligence
- Mentions a newsfeed on Fakebook (presumably referring to Facebook) about artificial intelligence
- Shares sarcastic comments about a new movie on Netflix related to artificial intelligence
- The speaker links the topic of artificial intelligence to the idea of turning truth into lies and vice versa
- Expresses concern about Trump running as an autocrat and becoming a dictator
- Raises concerns about the military being involved in domestic affairs and law enforcement
- Suggests that this could lead to an autocratic military-run society and a diminished democracy
- Describes Trump as a scared 77-year-old man who has watched many people in his orbit go to prison
- Comments that this could potentially be the last democratic election
- Asserts that dictators aren't dictators for just one day, implying a longer-lasting impact if Trump gains more power.

Notes on the Provided Text

- The speaker, identified as a vice president, claims to have met with over 150 world leaders, expressing their concerns about the potential second term of a person referred to as "he" or "Trump."
- The speaker mentions a different type of government and asks the audience to imagine calling 911 and being asked about their political affiliation instead of their emergency.
- The speaker accuses Trump of wanting to withhold aid from Blue states in natural disasters or terrorist attacks.
- The speaker, who identifies as a lifelong conservative, criticizes Trump for not supporting law enforcement, attacking the free press, abandoning free trade agreements, and distancing from NATO allies.
- The speaker warns that if Trump's first term was bad, the situation will worsen in a potential second term.
- The speaker discusses the prevalence of artificial intelligence (AI) in society and offers to bring "authentic intelligence" to counter the negative views about Trump.
- The speaker mentions that people dislike Trump, especially minorities, but dismisses these criticisms as meaningless.

Authentic Intelligence versus Artificial Intelligence in Media

- The main screen portrayal of opinions and sentiments towards President Trump does not align with the views expressed on the streets of Atlanta, Georgia.
- In a video, young black individuals express their love and support for Trump, contradicting the negative narrative often portrayed in the mainstream media.
- Another video shows a girl from Atlanta's media team running up to Trump, hugging him, and declaring their love for him, despite the media's negative portrayal.
- The mainstream media heavily covered Joe B's fundraiser with former presidents Obama, Clinton, and Hillary, highlighting the $25 million raised.
- In contrast, Trump's fundraiser, without any former presidents, raised $50 million, but received no media coverage, illustrating the lack of trust in mainstream media.
- Americans are urged to seek news from podcasters who have earned their trust and provide unbiased content.
- NPR, a publicly funded radio station, is accused of having a political bias, despite the expectation of a fair and balanced news source.
- A whistleblower from NPR, a veteran broadcaster with 25 years of experience, validates concerns about bias in the media.

Allegations of Bias and Lack of Diversity at NPR

- A senior business editor at NPR, Erri Berliner, published an article titled "I've been at NPR for 25 years here's how we lost America's trust," where he criticizes the outlet for being biased and intentionally covering Trump negatively.
- Berliner claims that NPR cherry-picked stories and pursued a Russia collusion narrative, even though it was based on rumors and shoddy documents. He mentions how Adam Schiff became a central figure for their coverage.
- The release of the Mueller report, which found no collusion, caused the Trump collusion story to fade away.
- Berliner emphasizes that the lack of an open-minded spirit and diversity within NPR's journalists is a concern. He discovered that among their editorial staff, there were 87 registered Democrats and zero Republicans.
- NPR's editor-in-chief dismissed the allegations, stating that it reflects a plague in their news industry.
- Berliner initially confronted NPR about the problem but the meeting was canceled, leading him to become a whistleblower.
- He further accuses NPR of refusing to cover the laptop story.
- Berliner believes that the truth will eventually come out and people are starting to wake up to the issues at hand.

Inflation and Economic Impact

- Donald Trump opposes funding for NPR and criticizes the Biden administration's handling of the economy.
- Under Trump, inflation was at 0%, while under Biden, it has risen significantly, with gas prices up 38.8%, electricity up 47%, and groceries up 3.3%.
- The Trump campaign should highlight these rising inflation rates.
- Inflation is predicted to continue rising, regardless of the actions taken by the Federal Reserve.
- The latest Consumer Price report shows prices up 3.5% compared to the same time last year, which is higher than expected.
- The Biden administration is working to combat inflation and build the economy from the bottom up, but gas prices continue to rise.
- Many people are unaware of the causes of rising gas prices.

Joe Biden's Sale of United States Strategic Petroleum Reserve

- Joe Biden has sold 275 million barrels from the United States strategic petroleum reserve since taking office.
- The motive behind the sale is to create an illusion of low gas prices.
- Biden has drained 57% of the emergency reserve supply, totaling 274 million barrels.
- The intention was to refill the reserve when oil prices reached $79 a barrel.

- However, the prices have remained above $86 a barrel, causing the White House to cancel petroleum purchases.
- Currently, there is only a 17-day supply in the emergency reserve.
- The government initially established a reserve of 727 million barrels, which has now decreased to 364 million barrels under Biden's administration.
- The declining reserve is raising concerns about the economy and the inability to control gas prices.
- Democrats want gas prices to decrease but are hesitant to increase oil production due to their focus on green energy initiatives.
- This has led to the depletion of precious reserves that would be needed in case of an embargo.
- Biden is also involved in a scam to gain public approval, as his approval numbers are low.
- The details of this scam are not provided in the text.

Biden's Plan to Forgive Student Loan Debt and its Impact on Blue Collar Workers

- Biden introduced a new plan to forgive student loan debt for 30 million potential voters, less than a year after the Supreme Court blocked his previous attempt.
- The plan is estimated to cost taxpayers $300 billion.
- It has been criticized as a slap in the face to blue collar workers who did not have the opportunity to attend college and have their loans paid for by the government.
- Blue collar workers are now forced to pay for someone else's useless degree.
- Each of the 162 million taxpayers in America would owe $2,000 to provide $10,000 debt forgiveness for 30 million students.
- Another option to pay for the plan would be to print more money, but this would negatively impact taxpayers and may lead to inflation.
- Biden's plan is seen as a scheme that benefits college graduates and attempts to gain their support for Democrats and Biden's reelection.
- The plan is criticized for being unfair to those who have paid off their loans or never took out a student loan.
- Professor Toto the Patriots Buy Club encourages individuals to invest in companies that uphold patriotic and conservative values.
- Traditional major corporations are accused of using consumer money to support political corruption and contribute to poor federal leadership.
- The Patriots Buy Club partners with a direct-to-consumer company offering over 400 sustainable and high-quality products.
- The club aims to redirect spending away from major corporations and towards companies that align with conservative values.
- To join the club, individuals can visit www.bybywalmart.com.

Trump's Abortion Stand and Constitutional Understanding

- Trump's abortion stand: Trump is morally wrong about abortion but he is constitutionally correct.
- Importance of discussing abortion: It is a foundational issue that must be understood, even amidst other current events.
- Trump's stance on abortion during the general election: He must take a more moderate stand to win the war of getting back into the White House.
- Democrats' response: Democrats don't want voters to know how moderate Trump's abortion stand is, as it takes away their ability to use it as an issue against him.
- Explanation of Trump's abortion stand: Trump is a prolifer, like his supporters. He appointed three pro-life judges and numerous federal judges around the country.
- Moderation during the general election: Presidential candidates often moderate their stance on issues during the general election as a compromise.
- Understanding the Constitution: It is important not to misunderstand how the Constitution works.
- Federal government's involvement in murder cases: Unless it is on federal property, the federal government typically does not handle the prosecution of murder cases, especially if it involves taking an innocent life.

The Role of State Government and Federal Government in Prosecuting Crime and Abortion

- State government vs federal government in prosecuting crime:
- Before Donald Trump, the federal government had taken powers to prosecute crimes committed at the state level.
- States had differing laws on prosecuting crimes, particularly on the taking of innocent life.
- Donald Trump had overturned the involvement of the federal government in prosecuting the taking of innocent life, including abortion.
- Federal government and abortion:
- Trump takes credit for overturning Roe v. Wade, but also rejects federal restrictions on abortion.
- Trump advocates for states to decide the question of abortion, allowing him to flip the script on the extremism of the Democrat agenda.
- By not advocating for a federal ban on abortion, Trump has taken away the Democrats' tactic of using clips of him being tricked into supporting a ban to discredit him.
- Trump's strategy and its implications:

- Trump's strategy allows him to own the argument on abortion and shift the focus away from the extremism of the Democrat agenda.
- The argument can now be shifted to showing full-term babies being killed under the Biden Administration.
- The Brilliance of Trump's strategy should not be second-guessed, as he is running for a political position and not for the role of pastor of a church.
- The personal opinion of the writer is that they hate abortion and believe Trump is morally wrong, but they acknowledge his political strategy.

Abortion, Constitution, and State and Federal Powers

- The Constitution does not mention or include the word "abortion."
- The left uses legal arguments to justify their position on abortion despite the lack of constitutional support.
- The Supreme Court, in the Dos case, made a constitutionally valid decision that the powers not delegated to the United States go to the states or the people.
- A federal ban on abortion would be a violation of the Constitution, which is why the Supreme Court overturned Roe v. Wade.
- Prosecuting crimes against innocent life is left up to the individual states, as the federal government has no business in this matter.
- The United States is a republic of 50 sovereign nations, and the states created the federal government.
- The states sacrificed certain powers to the national government that they believed could be better performed at the federal level.
- Examples of powers given to the federal government include overseeing the post office, establishing a monetary system, and declaring war.
- The original Constitution granted about 17 powers to Congress.
- Abortion was not among those powers given to Congress.
- Article 1, Section 8 of the Constitution outlines the limited presidential powers.

The Power of the Presidency, Abortion, and Centralization of Power

- The only power the presidency has is the veto power and the right of abortion.
- The founders did not consider abortion because they could not imagine a civilized person wanting to kill their unborn child.
- Therefore, abortion was not included in the Constitution and should be left to the states.
- State governments are closer to the people and allow for more control over the government.
- The founding fathers delegated limited powers to the federal government, with all other powers remaining with the states.

- The Democratic party seeks to centralize power in Washington DC, which is against the principles of a federal republic and constitutional republic.
- Joe Biden's stance on abortion has changed over time, and he now supports it as a right.
- The Deep state in Washington has systematically centralized power throughout American history.
- The overturning of Roe v. Wade by the Supreme Court was seen as a loss of power to the Godless left.
- Many actions taken by Congress today are not supported by the Constitution, such as federal loans for student education.
- The current centralization of power in the national government goes against what the forefathers rebelled against 250 years ago.

Constitutionality and Abortion Rights

- Donald Trump believes that abortion should be controlled by the state and its people, which aligns with the Constitution.
- Supporters of Trump should allow him to defend the Constitution and its principles.
- Trump's stance on abortion has removed the national right to take innocent life, which some view as a reason for celebration.
- The Supreme Court's repeal of Roe v. Wade in the Doe's case is seen as a correct decision.
- Some members of Congress, like Lindsey Graham, want federal involvement in abortions, but it is considered unconstitutional.
- Trump's stance aligns with the constitutionality of abortion, but its morality is a separate issue.
- The immoral environment is attributed to the Godless liberal left.
- Allowing states to control abortion policy is seen as preferable to a deep state-controlled federal government.
- Supporting Trump on the abortion issue is seen as important.
- The federal government does not have the authority to prosecute murder, theft, rape, or extortion, according to the Constitution.
- The power to prosecute crimes is reserved for the states, unless they choose to amend the Constitution.
- Overturning Roe v. Wade is viewed as a correct decision, as it allows for states to have the ability to enact their own laws on abortion.
- If a federal law on abortion is desired, it must be done through the amendment process, with the consent of the states.

The Constitution and Abortion in the United States

- The 13th Amendment abolished slavery through the amendment process, suggesting that the process of amendment could be used for addressing abortion.
- To establish a federal ban on abortion, an amendment process would be necessary, involving all states.
- The Constitution does not grant the federal government the authority to legislate on moral issues.
- Giving power to the federal government on moral issues, as seen with same-sex marriage, resulted in negative consequences when the Deep State took control.
- President Donald Trump aims to decentralize power from the Deep State and empower individual states to address moral issues, such as abortion.
- The Democrat-controlled Deep State would misuse its power to legalize actions like child mutilation if given control over moral issues.
- State regulation of abortion is currently the best option, as it allows for the voice of the people to be heard.
- In many states, babies will now be protected due to state regulation of abortion, which is a significant change from previous years.
- A federal abortion ban would be unconstitutional, and adherence to the Constitution is crucial.
- Placing trust in the federal government to regulate abortion for the entire nation would be both immoral and unconstitutional.
- The Constitution is best suited for a moral and religious population, but America no longer has a majority of such individuals.
- Donald Trump's stance on abortion is motivated by the need to address this lack of moral and religious values in America.

Power to the People and Patriotism in America

- The speaker emphasizes the importance of supporting the people rather than the "Deep state."
- Educated attendees of a conservative college are encouraged to correct others who claim they can't support Trump due to his stance on abortion.
- The audience is urged to be educated, inspired, motivated, and focused on the upcoming election.
- The speaker expresses confidence in winning bigly.
- The session concludes with gratitude towards fellow Patriots and an invitation to the next event.
- An excerpt from the song "God Bless the USA" by Lee Greenwood is recited, expressing gratitude for living in America and valuing freedom.

- Patriotism and love for the country are emphasized, mentioning various states and regions, and the importance of standing up for the nation. The audience is encouraged to join in singing.