

Please discuss a strategy you want to try this trimester, or discuss an “aha” moment or another take away from today’s PD.

Like the dots, abcd cards, group same answer packet.
I'm going to try using sticky notes
google question, all or nothing on short writes
A,B,C,D cards and true false
A,b,c, d cards
doing one in front of the class.
work together, grade the top for feedback to the group.
I like the dots and the reuseable folder packets.
who wants to be ruthlessly judged sounds fun.
Dots and sticky notes.
I would like to try “ruthlessly judging” a few students work in front of their peers. Then, most of the students will see good and bad examples!
I would use the question displayed on the projector screen, having all of the students responding simultaneously.
I like the Dots.
I really like the “dot” idea. I do warmups everyday with the students, but sometimes they do not participate. I think this could help with engagement.
I like the Dots and Google Classroom question.
I ditto the “Dots”
Whitmer: I will try to use the questions in Google Classroom
I think answering in paragraphs to practice answering questions would work well for my class and also putting the opening paragraph on the screen and fixing it would work well.
