

Today is an “E-Learning Day.” What does that mean?

To be counted in attendance for the day, students will need to open their email by 9:00am and correspond with their advisor via email. To log into their email, students should simply visit gmail.com and use their “@avalonschool.org” account.

Working with their advisor, students will make a plan for their work and check-in throughout the day. This could include work on an independent project, work that seminar instructors have assigned, general reading, or whatever else they determine as a team.

As they work, please remember that there are links to HEADRUSH, Google Classroom, the Infinite Campus Gradebook, and other important resources on our website (Avalon School Quick Links).

High school students should check their Headrush modules and checklist and middle school students should check Google Classroom. Class Instructors and Advisors may offer optional Google Meets sessions. These are not mandatory. Students will be notified via their email.

Please direct any student-specific questions to your student’s advisor.
