Purpose of this session

AI and blockchain now depend on each other in practice: agents transact on-chain, blockchains track AI provenance and settle compute, and AI strengthens on-chain analytics and security.

This session surveys the industry today and examines the open questions of agent accountability, identity, AML/CFT and consumer-protection compliance, and regulatory gaps, to shape the scope of FASE's AI + Blockchain workstream.

2. How to participate

This document is shared before, during, and after the session. Please use it to raise questions, answer others, and put forward ideas. Contributions in any form are welcome.

- Add a question in section 3. Anyone can answer it, not only the speakers.
- Propose an idea or approach in section 4, even if it is incomplete.
- Comment on the foundation document in section 5 by quoting the section or page you are responding to.
- Add your name if you are happy to be credited or contacted. Leave it blank to stay anonymous.

- Please do not delete or rewrite other people's entries. Add a reply underneath instead.

Views expressed here are those of individual participants and do not represent the official positions of BGIN or of the institutions participants belong to. Substantial written contributions may be considered for the session report and for future BGIN documents, with credit, and may qualify for a fee waiver at future Block meetings.

3. Questions and answers

Write your question in the next empty row. Anyone may answer in the Responses column. The chair will mark the status: Open, Answered, or Follow up.
