The Crown

Empress Faelinn

The monarch of Naath, their job is to make sure the kingdom runs smoothly as well as leading and protecting the people. The crown must be able to Uphold justice by being the judge in a court hearing, listening to both sides of the issue, and administering a proper lawful, and righteous decision. Besides their formal duties, the crown works in the interests of the inhabitants of the Kingdom. As head of state, it is the Crown's task to unify, represent and encourage the people. From making sure laws are upheld the crown must make sure that they are able to hold the proper image of protection, being regal, and leadership. When it comes to the crown, they must always put the people first.

High General of Military and Defense

(fire)

Controls the military and the defenses of the kingdom. It's this person's job to not only command the different branches of the kingdom's military but know how to use defensive tactics that seek to negate the enemy's offensive tactics. It is the act or process of forbidding an enemy from conquering territory. Military defense involves the use of weapons, such as blades, ships, and the sky force in war or battle to defend the kingdom.

◆ Wall Guard ◆

The Wall Guard as their name suggests stand guard atop the mighty walls of the capital. Their sigil is a grey stone wall with two Guardian's atop a white field. The Wall Guard is trained in a variety of weapons as being the linchpin of the capitals defense they have to be versatile. Upon signing up to join the Wall Guard the men and woman are given a choice between the various weapons and chose two to train on. Once finished their training is completed they join one of the ten battalions and are set to guard a section of wall from any who wish to harm the people of Naath. The different battalions are noted by the different Guardian's that adorn their patches and banners and they correlate to where the Guardian's are located.

◆ The Outriders ◆

While not the most glamorous section of the military the Outriders are the most active unit within the kingdom. The Outriders are comprised of solely cavalry both heavy and light. The Outriders are tasked with patrolling the realm. When bandits are spotted roaming the countryside the Outriders are notified and ride out in force. During times of war the Outriders act as the armies dedicated cavalry and as such maintain a high level of training and deploy advanced tactics. Every town or village knows of the Outriders with some of the larger towns housing their own unit of Outriders.

◆The Skyborn ◆

The Skyborn are a mystic group which has more myths surrounding them then actual facts. What is known is that they are skilled combatants in the sky, whether they have wings of their own or rely on their flying mounts these people are practically unbeatable in the sky. When one first enters the skyforce as a trainee they are given a hatchling, these hatchlings vary from small dragons the size of a large horse, to griffins, and pegisi. The bond they create with their mount is unbreakable and many skyborn retire if their mount dies. They act as the kingdoms airforce.

⇒ This particular group is known as The Kingsguard; The Kingsguard is among the highest Honor one could serve in all of Naath, and they only allow the Greatest of Warriors to join their Ranks, and purposely keep their numbers small as a trusted roundtable of individuals. A Total of 9 including the one who leads them.

⇒ The Lord Commander is the Title of whomever leads The Kingsguard, only the greatest Warrior in Naath can be gifted the Honor and Title of Lord Commander.

⇒ The Kingsguard as stated has a total of 9 slots; however the Lord Commander is counted in that 9, leaving The Kingsguard with 8 available spots. Below is a list of all named individuals and their Wikis of the Kingsguard, Lord Commander not included.

⇒ The Classic Uniform of The Kingsguard; Steel Armor with Gold and Silver coloring throughout the armors different sections. The Helmet is specially sculpted to give the Guard wearing it an extra blade; this one on their Head. Both pieces on the Helmet that jut out are sharp and if one was to take their Helmet off they could use it as a weapon itself if the need arises and they are desperate enough, however one individual was said to headbash in their fights on occasion with them. Each set of Kingsguard Armor comes with a Green Cloak to cover themselves with, with Green and White Standards to drape from their waists. In recent years however with Cathal as Lord Commander, changes are allowed to be made to the standard armor given Cathal is more open with his rules, as he himself refuses to wear the armor of the Kingsguard and instead wears his own. The most changes that have been done currently are some removing their helmets at times and maybe replacing the armor under the cloak and standards.

⇒ As for Equipment, each Kingsguard was expected to wield a Spear in hand and a Broadsword sheathed and hooked on their Belts at all times. With the current Lord Commander however, if one is more comfortable swapping the Broadsword for another Blade, he has made exceptions, although he prefers the Spears be kept he may also let a Kingsguard replace their Spear with another long-reaching weapon to replace it. At minimum, a Kingsguard needs 2 Weapons they're skilled with at any given time.

Purpose

⇒ A member of The Kingsguards is expected to serve their Lord with Devotion and Utter Loyalty; swearing Oaths that one who breaks said Oaths can find themselves at the chopping block of The Lord Commander. Their Job is to Serve and Protect The Royal Family, in present times that means The empress, they are seen at the Heels of their Ruler ready to Kill and Die for them. When not at the Rulers Heel, they can be found throughout the Home of their Ruler making sure dangers that may come to harm their Royal are warded off and taken care of before they can pose any real threat. Ultimately, they also may find themselves doing more than just doing their Guard duties if their Ruler, currently Queen, or Lord Commander commands them to.

⇒ One role the Lord Commander plays alongside leading The Kingsguard, is the role of The Executioner of Naath, their Blade being the one to take the life of those who are sentenced to death.

Emblem

⇒ The Emblem of the Kingsguard Is the Shield and Sword of the first Lord Commander; it has not been changed since its first being made. This symbol has also been made into a brooch of sorts, and the Lord Commander usually has it pinned somewhere on their person, usually under their armor, however they have it shown more openly for Council Meetings.

High priest/priestess

(spirit)

This person not only controls the temple and keeps it in perfect condition. But they protect holy artifacts and scrolls. Conduct marriages and holy ceremonies, and make sure that those who enter the holy ground follow the rules of the temple. This person is responsible for the acts that are associated with the gods of Naath and have some level of authority over people. Their authority is not higher enough than king guards and the person is still under the crown's command. If the people do mistreat the religion then the priest or priestess can add a judgment on their own without an official document from the crown.

Group History

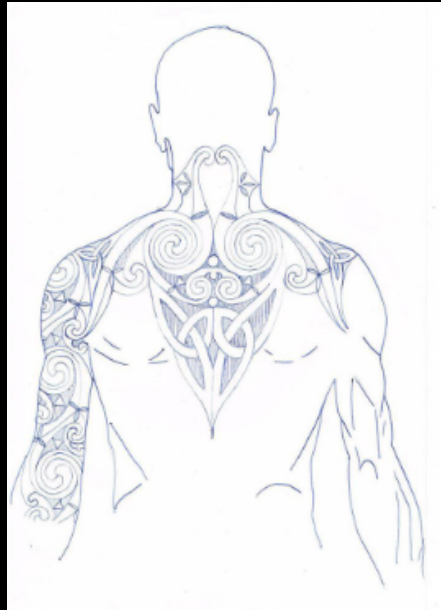

after the fall, and the rise of Naath the found that the old priest of the temple was corrupt and held selfish intentions, the gods had casted out the priest and appointed a young woman by the name of Ravaya Stone, a young girl that held the gods above all things in her life, as the new high priestess of the new temple of new Naath. It was Ravaya who had the staff removed and brought in new people she knew she could trust with the faith of the land and temple.

These people under her were called the The Aer Bor, why were they called Aer Bor? Its quite simple, for once an apprentice reached the point to be anointed a Hand of the temple they received stunning golden tattoos starting at the base of their neck, across their shoulder and down their arm to the palms of their hand. The ancient writing tattooed in gold on their skin is an old prayer in ancient runes. Those that know the old prayer it reads:

'From the heavens to the pits of the unknown, i give the my heart, body and soul, for you may use me as your servant to relay your works, by the four may i stay your sacred servant'

Now these traditions are still passed on marking those whom call themselves servants of the gods. The The Aer Bor are always known for their faith in the gods, their skill in holy magic, and their abilities to fight and protect their temple in the name of the gods.
