Victor Hill sent to jail after 37-count indictment handed down

Victor Hill

CLAYTON COUNTY, Ga. —

A grand jury indicted former Clayton County sheriff Victor Hill on 37 counts, alleging he used county cars for getaways and county credit cards for shopping sprees.

Hill's charges include theft by taking, making false statements and violation of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act, wrapping up a nearly year-long investigation.

A hearing was immediately held for Hill where a judge set bond at $50,000 and ordered the former sheriff to surrender his passport, remain in Georgia and not to contact any witnesses. Hill was still behind bars the next morning. His attorney said bonding companies want no part in the case.

"I've had them tell me they will not for fear that they will be decertified from being able to have bonds at the Clayton County Jail in the future," attorney Musa Ghanayem said.

Channel 2 investigative reporter Mark Winne talked to Hill before he addressed the grand jury panel Wednesday. Hill maintained his innocence and said he still plans on running for sheriff again.

"Looking forward to defending myself. I think everyone knows it's politically motivated and we're ready to get back on the campaign trail," Hill told Winne.

The grand jury started an investigation into Hill in April, and prosecutors finished their presentation on Wednesday afternoon. Hill then had the option to make a final statement before the panel voted on the charges.

Sources told Winne the special grand jury looked at the use of county credit cards, the handling of campaign finances, if there was personal travel using county equipment, if county employees engaged in campaign or personal business for Hill.

Clayton County Sheriff Kem Kimbrough has been critical of Hill, whom he won against in 2008. Kimbrough said he takes no joy in Hill's downfall but considers it vindication.

"It is not politically motivated. It is all about accountability and the integrity of the offices we hold," Kimbrough told Winne.

Kimbrough said he would be ready for Hill in another face-off.

"This is how I'm going to campaign against him," Kimbrough told Thomas, holding a copy of the indictment against Hill. "Not only was he a poor sheriff, but he broke the law."

Beatrice Powell, a former Clayton County corrections officer, was also indicted on perjury and theft by taking charges in connection with Hill's case. Investigators said they contacted her last summer about her friendship with Hill.

Investigators said they wanted to know if Powell campaigned for Hill on county time and whether he allowed her to get paid on the county's dime. Powell told investigators she committed no crime.

Hill's attorney, Steve Fry, said he will fight the charges and Hill has not violated the law. Hill is currently being held in the Gwinnett County Jail instead of the Clayton County Jail for security reasons.

LET ME BEGIN BY SAYING: THIS IS THE WORST CLIENT STEVE FRY COULD EVER REPRESENT, AND IT WILL RUIN HIS LEGAL CAREER AS SOMEONE KNOWN TO REPRESENT THE INTEGRITY OF THE FALSELY ACCUSED.... IN RE: Joseph A. MACCIONE.

IN RE: Joseph A. MACCIONE.

No. S10Y1960.

-- March 25, 2011

This disciplinary matter is before the Court on the Report and Recommendation of special master James E. Patterson who recommends that this Court accept the petition for voluntary discipline which was filed by Respondent, Joseph A. Maccione (State Bar No. 462925) after the Bar filed a Formal Complaint. In his petition, Maccione requests the imposition of a Review Panel reprimand with conditions for his admitted violations of Rules 5.3 and 8.4(a)(4). Although the maximum sanction for a single violation of either rule is disbarment, the State Bar has indicated that it has no objection to the requested discipline.

In his petition Maccione, who was admitted to the Bar in 1976, admits that he is a solo practitioner who for several years regularly used the services of an employee/contractor as an investigator and paralegal. Maccione was aware that the employee/contractor had no license as an investigator, no education in paralegal studies, and an extensive criminal history. Maccione nevertheless allowed the employee/contractor to use business cards and letterhead that indicated he was an investigator and paralegal associated with Maccione's firm. Maccione also allowed the employee/contractor to prepare correspondence to clients and others, to communicate with clients, to collect retainer funds for Maccione's firm, and to generally represent to the public that he was working on cases with Maccione.

In early June 2005, Maccione agreed to represent a client on a drug charge and in a civil action the client wished to file regarding the death of his dog. After accompanying the client to a meeting with a county official about the civil matter, Maccione referred the client to the employee/contractor so that he could prepare the civil complaint which Maccione then had filed as a pro se complaint. Maccione did not clearly inform the client that he would not be handling the civil matter himself; he did not monitor the employee/contractor's activities regarding preparation of the complaint; and he did not take any action to assist the client with his civil suit. In mid-June 2005, the client was arrested and charged with murder. Maccione and the employee/contractor met with the client and advised him that Maccione and another attorney would defend the client for a flat fee of $30,000, which included attorney fees for Maccione and the other attorney. The employee/contractor then prepared a document titled "Affidavit" to be signed by the client. The affidavit authorized Maccione's law firm, generally, and the employee/contractor, specifically, to take all of the client's personal property from his home, to be applied to the cost of his defense. Maccione signed the document as a notary notwithstanding the fact that the document had been left undated and that the signature line for the witness was blank. Maccione admits that he cannot say with any certainty that he observed the client executing this affidavit.

In late June 2005, while the client was confined in a mental hospital following a suicide attempt, the employee/contractor entered the client's home and took numerous items of personal property, purportedly pursuant to the above described affidavit (and apparently as payment for the employee/contractor's services). Maccione had not discussed with the client any fee for the employee/contractor's work on his case, nor did he provide the client with any billing statements or accounting for the employee/contractor's services. The value of the property taken by the employee/contractor was not credited toward the client's quoted legal fees. The client subsequently discharged Maccione and during the course of these disciplinary proceedings, Maccione severed his relationship with the employee/contractor. As a result, Maccione no longer uses the employee/contractor's services in any capacity and asserts that he will not use those services in the future. Based on these admitted facts and having reviewed the record as a whole, we agree with the special master that Maccione violated Rules 5.3 and 8.4(a)(4) of the Georgia Rules of Professional Conduct, See Bar Rule 4-102(d). However, we disagree with the special master that a review panel reprimand is the appropriate punishment under the circumstances presented here. In light of the serious nature of the facts presented in this case, and in light of Maccione's prior disciplinary history (he received an Investigative Panel reprimand in 1989), we conclude that a review panel reprimand is not the appropriate level of punishment to impose on Maccione for his actions. Although Maccione has ended his relationship with the employee/contractor, who the Bar believes to be the “primary wrong-doer in this matter,” that does not change the fact that Maccione supervised or otherwise acquiesced in the wrongful conduct of this employee/contractor to the detriment of his client.

Accordingly, we reject Maccione's petition for voluntary discipline.

Voluntary Discipline Rejected.

PER CURIAM.

All the Justices concur.

OKAY, SO HOW ARE VICTOR HILL AND MACCIONE CONNECTED? BY THE SOURCE NAMED BELOW, AS A CLIENT OF MACCIONE'S IN CASE(S) AGAINST HIM IN CLAYTON COUNTY:

IF FORMER SHERIFF VICTOR HILL'S MEMORY FAILS HIM....

<http://www.wsbtv.com/videos/news/victor-hill-subpoenaed-to-testify-for-grand-jury/vFC8H/>

I, Aja Brooks, and Anthony Richard Bruce will be happy to remind him of what Victor Hill had done while he was Sheriff, going back to 2006 and prior:

Along with evidence tampering:

- unethical use of confidential informants,
- not following due process of law by arranging sales cases with informants,
- taking the drug money profits and gambling the drug money profits and county funds in stock market schemes;
- violating oath of office in following the laws he was supposed to enforce
- WHILE HE WAS SUPPOSED TO BE MANNING THE JAIL!

In addition to the County's findings that he ran up a credit card for an unapproved Vegas trip, Hill held onto County funds $1.5 million or so, that he never should have taken out of County allotment/misuse of funds, AND HE FREQUENTED APARTMENT COMPLEXES TO SLEEP WITH UNDERAGE GIRLS, AND HAD HIS BODY GUARDS STAND LOOKOUT.

Victor Hill now also looks like he got off the crack rock, for once, after going through lengthy bankruptcy, becoming a used car salesman, and losing a bid for District 34 Senate seat.

Yet these things above, he most certainly did while Sheriff, in addition to his male arresting officer conducting an inappropriate search on me as a female, telling me to shake out my bra, without calling a female officer to search my person.

Victor Hill also collaborated with Henry County without notifying FBI, in regards to unethical use of confidential informants, and HCPD violated my Habeas corpus, who had 5 officers threaten me, even though my insurance, registration, and license was legitimate, that we could "do this the easy way, or the hard way".

Let Victor Hill deny the grand juries charges because HE IS LYING; unlike Victor Hill, both I and Anthony Richard Bruce can both pass lie detector tests !!!!

LET ME ALSO SAY, THAT NOT KNOWING WHERE VICTOR HILL WAS WHEN HE ELUDED POLICE FOR YEARS AND HAVING FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE KAREN HANDEL NOT CHARGE HIM WITH MISAPPROPRIATION SUNK HER BID FOR GA GOVERNOR. I HAVE NEVER REALLY FELT SAFE, NOT KNOWING WHERE VICTOR HILL LURKED, A BLACK WOLF ROAMING GEORGIA, AND ME NOW STRIPPED OF THE RIGHT TO CARRY A GUN.

WELL, I HAVE SOME NEWS FOR EVERYONE: I CONSIDER VICTOR HILL TO NOT JUST BE A DANGER TO MY PERSON, BUT I CONSIDER HIM TO BE AN UNDENIABLE DANGER TO THE COMMUNITY.

@wsbradio Victor Hill is a flight risk: he had to surrender his passport, and he can't leave GA -- bonding companies won't touch that.

A MAN LIKE HIM IS NO BETTER AND FRANKLY WAY WORSE THAN THE SO-CALLED CRIMINALS HILL ARRESTED WHILE IN OFFICE, FOR HIS FAILURE TO UPHOLD THE LAWS HE WAS SWORN TO ENFORCE. MY GREAT GRANDFATHER WAS A SHERIFF, HE ROLLED OVER IN HIS GRAVE IN SEBRING FOR THE MANNER IN WHICH I WAS ARRESTED AND THREATENED BY HCPD OFFICERS, AND I SOLEMNLY PROMISE THE ONLY SAFE PLACE FOR VICTOR HILL IS IN THE GROUND, WHERE HE IS NOT A DANGER TO ANYONE.

SO IF SHERIFF KEMBROUGH WANTS HILL TO BE BROUGHT TO JUSTICE, HE WILL HOLD VICTOR HILL IN JAIL AND PROTECT HIM IN CUSTODY UNTIL TRIAL. IF HE CAN NOT OR IF VICTOR HILL RUNS FOR THE LAW, WHEN AND IF I FIND HIM, VICTOR HILL'S DAY OF EVIL DEEDS IS DONE!!!!

FOR ME, IT IS NOT A POLITICAL GRIPE AGAINST VICTOR HILL, BUT THAT HE JEOPARDIZED MY OWN LIFE BY HAVING IT THREATENED BY SOMEONE WHOM HE EXPLOITED FOR TEMPORARY MONETARY ILL-GOTTEN GAIN, A DESPERATE MAN ON THE WRONG SIDE OF THE LAW: IF VICTOR HILL CROSSES MY PATH, I WILL DEFEND MYSELF, AND NO ONE WILL EVER HEAR OF HIM AGAIN OR WHAT BECAME OF HIM.

MAYBE NOW THAT VICTOR HILL HAS BEEN BROUGHT TO ANSWER FOR WHAT HE HAS DONE, GOVERNOR DEAL WILL SEE FIT TO OFFICIALLY PARDON ME. FIRST OFFENDER ACT NEVER REMOVES YOUR ARREST RECORD, AND EVEN THOUGH IT HAS BEEN OVER 5YRS. SINCE BEING ARRESTED FOR DRUGS I HAD NOT PAID FOR THAT WERE NOT MINE ANYWAY, WHEN AFTER BEING THREATENED BY SOMEONE I HAD COUNTED A FRIEND, I CONSIDER MY FULL COMPLIANCE WITH OFFICERS AND VIOLATION OF HABEAS CORPUS TO BE AN EGREGIOUS SMEAR ON THE ANNALS OF GEORGIA'S COURT JUSTICE.

MOVING ONTO THE MATTERS AT HAND:

Book Review: Ameritopia: The Unmaking of America

Ameritopia: The Unmaking of America. By Mark R. Levin Threshold Editions A Division of Simon & Schuster, 208 pages, $16.02 Buy from Amazon.com, Barnesandnoble.com

The trickiest part to nurturing society is education. How do you motivate citizens to read the words of the great philosophers? How do you meld that knowledge into government? The Founders knew the difference between utopianism and American exceptionalism. Patrick Henry opened the first Continental Congress in 1774 as a delegate from Virginia with these words; "I am not a Virginian—I am an American." No doubt this was the first time in history that any inhabitant of these colonies referred to themselves as Americans. This is the fundamental difference between this nation and others, we were the first to embrace a Constitutional Republic that recognized the individual.

In his new book "Ameritopia: The Unmaking of America" Mark Levin says; "... too many people remain oblivious to the perilousness of their surroundings, not realizing the precariousness of their Liberty and the civil society ...". This is a unremarkable observation, but very true. In Georgia the average voter turnout is ~approximately 25% of registered voters for primaries. Few understand exactly what is at stake and "they go through the motions of electing their guardians, deluding themselves that they and their fellow citizens remain free for they participate in self-government." They don't think about utopianism or Americanism.

Ameritopia reads like Cliff Notes of the great philosophers and for that reason alone this book is worth reading. If you haven't the motivation to read Plato's Republic, Thomas More's Utopia, or Montesquieu's Spirit of Laws read Mark Levin's book. The 110 pages in Ameritopia dedicated to the great philosophers will save you years of plowing through the original texts. It is a wonderful summation of these great works.

Levin concludes; "The American founding was an exceptional exercise in collective human virtue and wisdom – a culmination of thousands of years of experience, knowledge, reason, and faith." I think we all agree with this statement, but Mark goes on to say; "The Declaration of Independence is a remarkable societal proclamation of human rights, brilliant in its insight, clarity, and conciseness." This interpretation of the Declaration of Independence is exactly what started this nation down the road to Ameritopia. You hear Hannity say it all the time, "I believe America is a force for Freedom" around the world. Truth is The Declaration of Independence was simply a document drafted in order to secede from the British Empire. The middle portion is a list of charges against the King. The Preamble is simply a justification for secession written to entice the people in the counties to agree to secede. More for propaganda reasons than a "remarkable societal proclamation". Next Levin writes; "The Constitution of the United States is an extraordinary matrix of governmental limits, checks, balances, and divisions, intended to secure for posterity the individual's sovereignty as proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence." Again the Declaration of Independence didn't proclaim anything except that the colonies were declaring their freedom from the British Empire. The Founders seceded from the British Empire and they wrote King George declaring this simple fact. Now lets address Mark's interpretation of the Constitution.

The Constitution is a form of government, limited in nature, written down so not to be misconstrued. The Bill of Rights are further restraints on the federal government for the states feared that the people sent to Washington DC would misconstrue the original intent. Case in point, FDA, EPA, HHS, DOE, DOT, and the myriad of other agencies and bureaus set up to pilfer the wealth of the people of this nation. Hannity and Limbaugh should take note that nowhere in the Constitution does it give the power to the federal government to be a "Force for Freedom around the world." The Constitution does not give the power to the federal government to send us around the world to grow the American Empire.

Ameritopia is not utopianism, it's actually the result of the criminals we the American people have sent to Washington DC since the election of 1860. The first Guardian was Abraham Lincoln. Successive Congresses and Presidential administrations since Lincoln have sought to impose their vision on America in order to steal from the American taxpayer. Republicans are as guilty as the Democrats and in fact government has grown larger under Republicans than Democrats over the decades.

The Tea Party's understand the problem and many of them are scared, because they don't know what to do about it. There is only one solution, because Washington DC can't be fixed. There is absolutely no reason for any state to remain in this union. The federal government is now net-net a negative on the states and the people.

Everyone should read Mark Levin's book, Ameritopia: The Unmaking of America, because for an education it is a shortened version of the great philosophers, but more importantly it illustrates the misconceptions about our Founding that started us on the path down into the pits of Ameritopia.

NOW ONTO MATTERS THAT AREN'T REGURGITATED AMERICANISM AND PITHY REMAKES OF OUR AMERICAN PHILOSOPHERS....

ABC Insider: Marianne Gingrich Interview Likely To Air Before Primary; Gingrich Daughters Respond

CHARLESTON, S.C. -- The Drudge Report began teasing political reporters Wednesday that a network's holding a "bombshell campaign interview." And soon, Drudge revealed that the network in question, ABC, had conducted a two-hour interview with Marianne Gingrich, ex-wife of Newt Gingrich, that may not run until after the South Carolina primary. The decision, Drudge reported, sparked a "civil war" at the network. ABC staffers were caught by surprise at the news, telling The Huffington Post that if there was a "civil war," they hadn't heard about it. That doesn't mean there wasn't any debate among ABC executives over when to air the interview, but simply that the war certainly wasn't raging through the newsroom. It also looks like the interview will air before Saturday's South Carolina primary after all. One ABC insider said that the Gingrich interview, conducted with Brian Ross, will likely air on Thursday's "Nightline." Marianne Gingrich, the former Speaker's second wife, of 18 years, hasn't been shy about her feelings toward her ex-husband's presidential ambitions, telling Esquire in 2010 that there's "no way."

"He could have been president," she said. "But when you try and change your history too much, and try and recolor it because you don't like the way it was or you want it to be different to prove something new ... you lose touch with who you really are. You lose your way."

"He believes that what he says in public and how he lives don't have to be connected," Gingrich added, in the Esquire interview. "If you believe that, then yeah, you can run for president."

In the Esquire interview, Marianne also dismisses the conversion to Catholicism during his current, and third, marriage. She said it "has no meaning."

It's unclear who leaked the story to Drudge -- perhaps an ABC staffer who didn't want the interview to possibly get held until next week or rival campaign operative hoping to get Gingrich's baggage front-and-center on the influential conservative aggregator. Whoever the source, they got the political tongues wagging just 72 hours before the primary.

Gingrich's two daughters from his first marriage pushed back Wednesday, writing in a letter to the network's leadership that "ABC News or other campaigns may want to talk about the past, just days before an important primary election [but] Newt is going to talk to the people of South Carolina about the future."

The Gingrich daughters' letter, provided to The Huffington Post, is below:

To: ABC News Leadership
From: Kathy Lubbers, Jackie Cushman
Date: January 18, 2012

The failure of a marriage is a terrible and emotional experience for everyone involved. Anyone who has had that experience understands it is a personal tragedy filled with regrets, and sometimes differing memories of events. We will not say anything negative about our father's ex-wife. He has said before, privately and publicly, that he regrets any pain he may have caused in the past to people he loves.

ABC News or other campaigns may want to talk about the past, just days before an important primary election. But Newt is going to talk to the people of South Carolina about the future -- about job creation, lower taxes, and about who can defeat Barack Obama by providing the sharpest contrast to his damaging, extreme liberalism. We are confident this is the conversation the people of South Carolina are interested in having.

Our father is running for President because of his grandchildren -- so they can inherit the America he loves. To do that, President Obama must be defeated. And as the only candidate in the race, including Obama, who has actually helped balance the national budget, create jobs, reform welfare, and cut taxes and spending, Newt felt compelled to run -- to serve his country and safeguard his grandchildren's future.

Newton Leroy Gingrich entered Washington politics as a Georgia congressman in 1979 and exited in 1999 after resigning his position as speaker of the House.

His four-year speakership is most frequently noted in conservative circles for his success in pressuring President Bill Clinton to sign a conservative welfare reform package into law and overseeing a short period of balanced or near-balanced budgets. He also received a large share of the blame for the 1995 government shutdown, when the public saw him as a stubborn politician more willing to allow the government to run out of funds than to compromise.

But beyond the capital he's cultivated in the conservative movement, Gingrich's real political credentials have always been undercut by his personal history. He's had three wives. He reportedly brought divorce papers to his first wife while she was in a hospital bed recovering from uterine cancer (though this narrative was denied by both Gingrich and his daughter, Jackie Gingrich Cushman, in a recent report). His eventual separation from his second wife was less dramatic, but no less memorable. According to an extensive profile in *Esquire, he told Marianne Gingrich that she was a "Jaguar" and that "all I want is a Chevrolet." That brought him to his third marriage to Callista Gingrich, who was a House staffer when she began an affair with her eventual husband.

More than 143,000 FL GOP voters have cast ballots -- 20,000 more than Iowa caucus

More than 138,000 Florida Republicans have cast mail-in absentee ballots already of the 455,622 requested so far and another 5,000 have voted early at the polls in some counties, according to Republican Party of Florida's spokesman, Brian Hughes.

For context, consider that the total ballots cast in the Iowa caucus was 122,000.

And there's more. The Iowa caucus was essentially botched. Rick Santorum was just declared the official winner -- not Mitt Romney. That has some Florida Republicans wondering why Iowa gets such a focus. Not only are Democrats and independents allowed to vote in the party's election -- the caucus is run poorly.

Our first election in the nation is in a state that lets people vote on construction paper," said David "DJ" Johnson, former Republican Party of Florida executive director and adviser to Jon Huntsman's now-scuttled presidential campaign.

"There are third-grade elections for class president that are run better than Iowa's caucus," Johnson said.

GOP officials: Santorum edges Romney in Iowa count

The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Rick Santorum edged front-runner Mitt Romney by 34 votes in a surprise flip to the final tally of the Iowa caucuses, but no winner will be declared because some votes remain missing in the event's closest finish ever, Republican officials said Thursday.

Romney had initially been considered the winner — by just 8 votes — of the first contest in the GOP presidential nomination contest.

Iowa GOP Chairman Matt Strawn is scheduled to announce the certified vote totals Thursday morning. Republican officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to pre-empt his announcement, said Strawn wouldn't declare a winner because some votes can't be counted. Votes from 8 of the state's 1,774 precincts are missing.

Although the final tally from the Jan. 3 caucuses remains excruciatingly close, the new numbers could give a boost to Santorum and other candidates trying to undermine Romney's dominance over the field as South Carolina primary voters go to the polls Saturday.

An Iowa GOP source, also speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that the certified results would show Santorum with 29,839 votes and Romney at 29,805, a difference of 34. Ron Paul finished third with 26,036 votes.

In a statement, Romney called it a "virtual tie." The former Massachusetts governor praised Santorum's "strong performance" in the state.

Santorum, a former Pennsylvania senator, and other GOP candidates are vying to attract voters seeking a more conservative alternative to Romney, who followed Iowa with a solid victory in New Hampshire, the second contest of the race.

The Des Moines Register first reported the certified caucus totals on Thursday.

Newt Gingrich lacks the moral character to serve as President, his second ex-wife Marianne told ABC News, saying his campaign positions on the sanctity of marriage and the importance of family values do not square with what she saw during their 18 years of marriage.

In her first television interview since the 1999 divorce, to be broadcast tonight on Nightline, Marianne Gingrich, a self-described conservative Republican, said she is coming forward now so voters can know what she knows about Gingrich.

CLICK HERE to see a preview of ABC News' exclusive broadcast interview with Marianne Gingrich and then catch the full interview tonight on ABC News' Nightline at 11:35 p.m. ET.

In her most provocative comments, the ex-Mrs. Gingrich said Newt sought an "open marriage" arrangement so he could have a mistress and a wife.

She said when Gingrich admitted to a six-year affair with a Congressional aide, he asked her if she would share him with the other woman, Callista, who is now married to Gingrich.

"And I just stared at him and he said, 'Callista doesn't care what I do,'" Marianne Gingrich told ABC News. "He wanted an open marriage and I refused."

Marianne described her "shock" at Gingrich's behavior, including how she says she learned he conducted his affair with Callista "in my bedroom in our apartment in Washington."

"He always called me at night," she recalled, "and always ended with 'I love you.' Well, she was listening."

All this happened, she said, during the same time Gingrich condemned President Bill Clinton for his lack of moral leadership.

She said Newt moved for the divorce just months after she had been diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis, with her then-husband present.

"He also was advised by the doctor when I was sitting there that I was not to be under stress. He knew," she said.

Gingrich divorced his first wife, Jackie, as she was being treated for cancer. His relationship with Marianne began while he was still married to Jackie but in divorce proceedings, Marianne said. There was no immediate comment from Gingrich on his ex-wife's allegations. Gingrich has said during the campaign he has "no relationship" with Marianne.

While she had been quoted earlier as saying she could end his career, Marianne Gingrich defended Newt's ethics while he served in Congress and came under several ethics investigations.

"At the time, I believed him to be ethical," she said in the interview.

The former Mrs. Gingrich says Newt began to plan a run for President at the time of the divorce and told her that Callista "was going to help him become President."

In a statement to ABC News provided by the campaign, Gingrich's two daughters from his first marriage said, "The failure of a marriage is a terrible and emotional experience for everyone involved."

The daughters, Kathy Lubbers and Jackie Cushman said they would not say anything negative about Marianne and said their father "regrets any pain he may have caused in the past to people he loves."

Marianne Gingrich said Newt has never expressed any such regrets or apologized to her.

Catholic Bishops of Washington Call on Faithful to Protect Marriage

Thu Jan 19 2012 08:26

100% of readers think this story is Fact. Add your two cents.

An excerpt from their letter published today:

Upholding the present definition of marriage does not depend on anyone's religious beliefs. Washington State's present law defining marriage as "a civil contract between a male and a female" is grounded not in faith, but in reason and the experience of society. It recognizes the value of marriage as a bond of personal relationships, but also in terms of the unique and irreplaceable potential of a man and woman to conceive and nurture new life, thus contributing to the continuation of the human race. A change in legislation would mean that the state would no longer recognize the unique sacrifices and contributions made by these couples, thereby adding to the forces already undermining family life today.

For these reasons, we the Catholic Bishops of Washington State call on the citizens of this state to maintain the legal definition of marriage. We ask all to join in praying with us for married couples and families and to do everything possible to support them.

Millions of Americans oppose SOPA and PIPA because these bills would censor the Internet and slow economic growth in the U.S.

Two bills before Congress, known as the Protect IP Act (PIPA) in the Senate and the Stop Online Piracy Act (SOPA) in the House, would censor the Web and impose harmful regulations on American business. Millions of Internet users and entrepreneurs already oppose SOPA and PIPA.

ISSA INTRODUCES THE OPEN ACT

An effective, targeted solution to online copyright infringement

WASHINGTON, DC – Today, Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif, officially introduced H.R. 3782, the Online Protection & Enforcement of Digital Trade Act in the U.S. House of Representatives. This bill delivers stronger intellectual property rights for American artists and innovators while protecting the open, accessible Internet Americans deserve. This bipartisan, bicameral bill protects American artists and innovators through the International Trade Commission (ITC), by applying due process to investigate intellectual property infringement claims against foreign "rogue" websites and cuts off funding to sites found to be willfully and primarily trafficking infringed material. Senator Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has introduced the OPEN Act in the U.S. Senate.

"OPEN is a targeted, effective solution to the problem of foreign, rogue websites stealing from American artists and innovators," said Issa. "Today's Internet blackout has underscored the flawed approach taken by SOPA and PIPA to the real problem of intellectual property infringement. OPEN is a smarter way to protect taxpayers' rights while protecting the Internet."

Issa and Wyden released the draft OPEN Act at www.KeepTheWebOpen.com last year, using the Madison platform to open up the legislative process to taxpayers for the first time. Since then, OPEN has received more than 150 substantive comments and crowdsourced suggested improvements, many of which were included in the formal bill introduction. To date, nearly 300,000 Americans have visited the website.

Upon the introduction of the OPEN Act, these original cosponsors offered the following statements:

"The Government should not be in the business of censoring speech. The Federal Government has no right to censor the Internet."

Rep. John Campbell

"I strongly support the OPEN Act, as it is legislation that will effectively crack down on rogue foreign websites and protect American consumers, while protecting and preserving the innovative and job-creating engine that is the Internet."

Rep. Jason Chaffetz

"SOPA threatens our cyber security, undermines freedom of speech, and chills innovation in one of the few sectors of our economy that is actually working. While I understand and appreciate the need to protect intellectual property, SOPA is a massive and inappropriate overreach. Instead, I strongly support the OPEN Act. This bi-partisan legislation addresses the problem of online piracy without causing collateral damage to the Internet as SOPA would."

Rep. Peter DeFazio

"As written, SOPA and PIPA would jeopardize online freedom and grant corporations and the federal government unprecedented power to censor the Internet. I support the OPEN Act because it targets the people breaking the law without threatening the freedom of every other Internet user."

Rep. Lloyd Doggett

"The threat to an open Internet posed by Rep. Lamar Smith's SOPA cannot be cleaned up with soap and a wire brush. It should be rejected in favor of a more focused alternative, like the OPEN Act, which addresses legitimate piracy concerns without mandating censorship or blocking websites."

Rep. Anna Eshoo

"Rogue websites and the pirates behind them represent the hijacking of American genius, and must be stopped. But the Stop Online Piracy Act's (SOPA) overly broad language will seriously hinder the growth of new businesses, new investments, and new jobs. The economic opportunities and innovation created by the Internet and start-ups could be crushed under the weight of SOPA. Today's introduction of the OPEN Act provides us with a framework on how to best protect U.S. intellectual property rights, and I'm proud to support it."

Rep. Blake Farenthold

"An open internet is a marketplace for ideas that encourages innovation and economic growth. A free and open Internet gives everyone an audience for the free flow of ideas, it is the soap box of the 21st Century for political discourse exemplifying the American value of free speech. Social media is a gateway to friends and loved ones and puts new business opportunities at our fingertips. The internet is our newest frontier and must be free from oppressive government regulation."

Rep. Mike Honda

"Throughout the public debate for the Stop Online Piracy Act and the Protect IP Act, I have often stated that at the heart of this issue are fundamental questions about what the internet and free speech means to Americans, intellectual property rights holders, and our economy; these questions are too important to haphazardly rush through Congress without a full and open debate. No one denies that copyright infringement and piracy are serious problems. What deserves a full debate are the protections that legitimate sites should have and by what method we expose criminals while allowing lawful businesses and people, like the constituents in my District, to continue to innovate in ways that change the way we look at the world. That is why I proudly support the OPEN Act. Not only for how it is crafted, properly targeting and defining rogue actors without putting innovation in danger, but also the way in which it was crafted: in a full open forum that has allowed for robust debate. It is my sincere hope that the introduction of this bill represents a critical turning point in this debate, where diverse groups of stakeholders come together and thoroughly work on a solution."

Rep. Tim Johnson

"It is the right of every American to be compensated and receive payment for their efforts, whether they are artists, manufacturers, or any other type of business. While the protection of intellectual property in any form is a necessary function of government, these bills do not solve the problem of privacy, do not fully address the issue, and are not supported by the American public or the majority of stake holders in this issue. Simply put, these measures add unnecessary regulators to the federal bureaucracy and in the long-run, don't solve the problem. The Open Act does."

Rep. Jim Langevin

"We must act to use existing laws and organizations along with new marketing regimes to crack down on digital pirates while fully leveraging a growing market for online content," said Langevin, co-founder of the Congressional Cybersecurity Caucus. "Instead of trying to mitigate security, economic, and Internet freedom concerns with broad, over-reaching technical solutions, I support proposals like this one that seek a middle ground for curbing online piracy while protecting American jobs and innovative technologies that have allowed us to remain the world leader online."

Rep. Zoe Lofgren

Congress doesn't have to censor the Internet or restrain innovation in order to fight online piracy. The OPEN Act shows there's a better way. It relies on proven remedies—attacking the profit motive for online infringement—without the collateral damage to the Internet that SOPA and PIPA would cause. The OPEN Act has already benefited from a novel legislative experiment, through the solicitation of public comments and revisions at keepthewebopen.com. After the bill's introduction, I look forward to hearing additional constructive feedback and ways to incorporate it as the bill moves forward.

Rep. Doris Matsui

"While combating online copyright infringement is a goal we all support, SOPA, as it is currently written, would cause substantial harm to American innovation and the economic opportunities created by the Internet ecosystem. Americans increasingly rely on the Internet in many important ways, from looking for a job to taking online education courses, accessing health care, and so forth. Moreover, small businesses and entrepreneurs rely on an open and free Internet to be able to offer services, and to grow and expand their businesses. That is why I am happy to join my colleagues today in introducing the bipartisan OPEN Act, which will ensure the Internet remains open and free to all Americans and enables our innovators to continue to keep our country competitive."

Rep. Patrick McHenry

"In a society that values creativity and innovation, it's important to protect intellectual property and prevent copyright infringement. The OPEN Act targets online piracy from rogue websites while safeguarding First Amendment rights and ensuring the American tradition of due process."

Rep. George Miller

"SOPA and PIPA are not the right answer for the future of the Internet, and that is why I oppose them. Our bipartisan bill introduced today – the OPEN Act – can achieve what SOPA would not: crack down on foreign websites that willfully violate copyright laws, without going to the dangerous extremes proposed in the other legislation."

Rep. Jared Polis

"Unlike SOPA and PIPA, the OPEN Act will effectively combat piracy from foreign websites while preserving Internet freedom. By using a 'follow-the-money' approach we can shut down foreign sites that steal intellectual property while ensuring that the Internet remains an engine of innovation, information and job creation. Without access to capital, these foreign websites will wither and die while the Internet continues to grow and thrive."

Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner

"As an ardent defender of American intellectual property rights, I am pleased to see the OPEN Act introduced to target rogue sites without destroying Internet infrastructure or crippling legitimate innovation online. Congress must absolutely take the threat of piracy seriously, and this legislation shows we can do so without opening up the floodgates for litigation or limiting freedom of expression."

Rep. Mike Thompson

"Today, thousands of websites such as Wikipedia and WordPress have gone dark, giving us a glimpse of what it could be like if the overly broad SOPA legislation became law. SOPA would stifle innovation, resulting in fewer new businesses, fewer new investments and fewer new jobs. While online piracy is something we must continually fight, SOPA is the wrong way to do it. That is why I am working with global leaders like Google and Twitter, to instead enact the OPEN Act, which still combats piracy but does so in a way that doesn't let broad government oversight stifle the innovation and creativity that has been a driving force behind the Internet industry's economic success."

Today is an unusual day at RedState.

Many websites around the nation and the world are going dark today in solidarity against SOPA, the Stopping Online Piracy Act (SOPA) pending in Congress. Many of this site's good friends, like Marsha Blackburn of Tennessee and Marco Rubio of Florida (a co-sponsor of the Protect IP Act in the Senate, which is the Senate version of SOPA) are supporters of this horrible legislation that would give Eric Holder and future attorneys general the right to shut down websites with minimal, if any, due process.

While it pains us to do so, we are committed to working against the re-election of each Republican co-sponsor of SOPA and Protect IP, including Rep. Blackburn and Sen. Rubio. Both pieces of legislation overreach their goals and will harm the internet.

We hope the Republican co-sponsors of these pieces of legislation will remove their names and we hope the legislation will die. In solidarity with those sites shutting down today to show you the potential impact of this legislation, RedState will suspend posting new content for much of today.

On the front page of RedState you'll find a tool you can use to contact your member of Congress and urge they oppose both SOPA and Protect IP.

FAITH 'WE'RE GONNA BE HOMELESS': NYC PASTORS & POLITICIANS HOLD PROTEST AGAINST BAN ON CHURCHES USING PUBLIC SCHOOL SPACE

Politicians and faith leaders came together in Lower Manhattan, NYC to protest the city's public school church worship ban

Pastors and clergy have held a series of protests in New York City against a ban on church use of public school buildings for “worship.” The rule, which goes into effect on Feb. 12, would leave countless churches homeless and without a location to converge.

On Wednesday, the Blaze was on-site as faith leaders and politicians came together, once again, to protest on the steps of the Tweed Courthouse in Lower Manhattan. After participating in a press conference held by Bronx Councilman and pastor Fernando Cabrera, the group marched to nearby City Hall, singing Christian hymns and humming praise songs along the way. New York City Comptroller John Liu and City Council members Peter Vallone Jr., Letitia James and Ydanis Rodriguez joined the protesters in their efforts. Rev. Richard Del Rio (the Blaze interviewed Del Rio about his opposition to the clergy ban at Ground Zero last year), a local faith leader at Abounding Grace Ministries, also spoke at the event.

“We’re gonna be homeless,” Del Rio said, going on to claim that he doesn’t see another alternative location for his church.

“Throughout the years we have served. We have worked with the children. We have worked with the gangs. I have worked with the police department...to be able to [work] with the community,” he said. “And now, Mr. Mayor...you forgot and you’re turning a deaf ear and a blind eye and you’re closing your mind to what it is we do.”

House Committee to Consider Bill to Advance Keystone Pipeline

Lachlan Markay

January 19, 2012 at 9:34 am

In the wake of President Obama's decision to shut down the Keystone XL pipeline on Wednesday, the House Energy and Commerce Committee has scheduled a hearing to review legislation that would restart the project, and give oversight responsibility to an agency the bill's proponents say is less politically motivated than the White House. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton will be invited to testify at the hearing, scheduled for Jan. 25, to discuss her department's environmental review procedures.

The hearing will focus on a bill introduced by Rep. Lee Terry (R-NE), which would allow construction on the pipeline to begin a month after passage. The legislation would shift responsibility for approving the project from the White House to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Under the bill, FERC would have 30 days to approve the Keystone route examined in State's "Final Environmental Impact Statement," which found no significant environmental risk associated with the project. Construction would begin immediately after FERC approval. Nebraska, which has expressed concerns over the route of the pipeline, could then craft its own route, seek approval from its own environmental regulatory body, and submit it to FERC for approval, which would have 30 days to approve that route.

In an interview with Energy & Environment TV, Terry explained that he wants to take responsibility for the Keystone pipeline "out of the politics that have developed in the State Department and the White House."

While FERC does have experience with pipelines, they generally transport natural gas. Heritage energy policy expert Nick Loris has offered a proposal that, while moving Keystone forward, would delegate responsibility for approving the project to Congress.

A simple, effective approach would be for Congress to authorize the pipeline application as submitted by TransCanada pursuant to its authority to regulate commerce with other nations. Since there is no federal entity that sites and authorizes Interstate petroleum pipeline construction, the state of Nebraska could site and approve an alternative route, following the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration's construction codes.

Both Terry and other Energy and Commerce members blasted the administration's Keystone decision in a news

release announcing the hearing. "The White House, blinded by politics and public perception, has turned Keystone from a commonsense issue into a political issue," Terry stated.

Heritage has also criticized the administration's apparently political move. The decision on Keystone "rejects jobs, energy, and logic," noted Loris.

Democrats receive more Bain Capital dollars than Republicans

By Alexander Bolton - 01/19/12 05:30 AM ET

Democrats have accepted more political donations than Republicans from executives at Bain Capital, complicating the left's plan to attack Mitt Romney for his record at the private equity firm.

During the last three election cycles, Bain employees have given Democratic candidates and party committees more than $1.2 million. The vast majority of that sum came from senior executives.

Republican candidates and party committees raised over $480,000 from senior Bain executives during that time period.

Recipients include Democratic senators facing tough reelection races this year, such as Jon Tester (Mont.), Claire McCaskill (Mo.), Sherrod Brown (Ohio) and Bill Nelson (Fla.).

The Hill reviewed contributions made from the 2008, 2010 and 2012 cycles.

Romney has collected more money from Bain Capital employees than any federal candidate since the beginning of 2007, amassing more than $166,000 in contributions. He took more than $84,000 from Bain employees in the first three quarters of 2011.

But President Obama received a sizable share as well. He has accepted more than $80,000 from Bain employees since the beginning of 2007. Bain Capital employees gave $27,500 to Obama during the first three quarters of 2011.

The donations were reported to the Federal Election Commission and culled in a database created by the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonpartisan group that tracks federal campaign spending.

Obama does not accept money from lobbyists, but does accept donations from Wall Street executives. Campaign finance records show that Democrats collect more money from Wall Street than does the GOP.

The sums collected by Democrats from managing partners and other senior executives at Bain could hamper the Democratic message that Romney is a corporate raider who does not care about workers, charges based on his record as CEO of Bain.

Democrats could be forced to justify attacking Bain — which specializes in buying companies and boosting profitability, often by laying off workers — while accepting campaign funds from the same executives who made the cost-cutting decisions.

“They’re going to have a difficult time explaining why they’re padding their war chest with contributions from the same executives that they’re accusing of hurting jobs,” said Brian Walsh, a spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Democratic strategists disagree.

“What you have with Romney and Bain is a kid stuck with his hand in the cookie jar. There’s no question he had direct involvement in thousands of people losing their jobs and in some cases their homes,” said David Di Martino, a Democratic strategist. “That’s different than company executives at an investment fund making contributions to Democrats.”

Republican presidential candidates, most notably former Speaker Newt Gingrich (Ga.), have led the charge in ripping Romney about his tenure at Bain. But Democratic leaders have also criticized Romney’s record in the private sector, and liberal operatives say it will be a major theme of the 2012 election if he wins the GOP nomination.

“Mitt Romney, I think, is more of a job cremator than a job creator,” Democratic National Committee Chairwoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz said on a conference call with reporters earlier this month. “He was a corporate-buyout specialist at Bain Capital. He dismantled companies. He cut jobs. He forced companies into bankruptcy and he outsourced jobs and sent jobs overseas.”

Meanwhile, Rep. James Clyburn (S.C.), the assistant House Democratic leader, last week held a conference call on Romney’s record at which he criticized Bain for closing a photo-album factory in Gaffney, S.C.

Despite the donations from Bain officials to Democrats, Romney is clearly on the defensive, according to Darrell West, director of governance studies at the Brookings Institution.

He said Obama will be able to use the bully pulpit to steer the national conversation.

"The president will be focusing on job impact instead of campaign contributions," said West.

Republicans have already tried to make campaign donations an issue in battleground states.

The Montana Republican Party ran television ads in the fall criticizing Tester from accepting more than $200,000 in contributions from lobbyists.

Tester received a $2,500 contribution from Joshua Beckenstein, a managing director at Bain Capital, in June of last year, according to a fundraising report.

McCaskill received $2,500 from Beckenstein in March and $5,000 from Jonathan Lavine, a Bain Capital investor, in June.

Lavine also gave $1,000 to Brown in May of 2010, and $2,500 to Sen. Robert Menendez (D-N.J.) in September of last year. Over the last three cycles, he gave nearly $90,000 to the Democratic National Committee, $78,000 to the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee and $25,000 to sitting Democratic senators.

As of Dec. 21, fundraising reports show Bain employees gave $123,000 to the Democratic National Committee in 2011, according to the Center for Responsive Politics.

The Democratic fundraising advantage, however, was offset by at least $750,000 that Bain Capital employees gave to Restore Our Future, a pro-Romney super-PAC, in 2011.

Paul Edgerley, an investor at Bain Capital, gave $500,000 to Restore our Future in May. But Edgerly also donated to former Sen. Chris Dodd (Conn.), who recently served as Democratic chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

In April and June, he gave two $2,500 contributions to Alan Khazei, a Democrat who was vying to take on Sen. Scott Brown (R-Mass.). Khazei has since dropped out and endorsed Elizabeth Warren for the Senate Democratic nomination.

In the 2010 cycle, many Bain executives also gave to Steve Pagliuca (D), a managing director at Bain who sought to fill former Sen. Edward Kennedy's (D-Mass.) seat but lost in the primary.

Richard Rubin — husband of former Broward County Commissioner Diana Wasserman-Rubin, who still faces seven felony charges of her own — was sentenced this morning to ten months in federal prison.

Rubin, 66, pleaded guilty in April to federal tax evasion after failing to report $100,000 in fees he received from the town of Davie for a land deal he brokered in 2004.

With attorney David Bogenschutz at his side, Rubin managed to get only ten months up the river — which is in accordance with sentencing guidelines but much less than the maximum penalty of five years.

Rubin had said in court that he and the wife faced financial burdens from damage done to their home by Hurricane Wilma and also owed on a loan he could not repay — which is why he attempted to cheat on his taxes a bit.

That also wasn't too long after Rubin took in $1.1 million for writing grants for the town of Southwest Ranches — grants that were approved in part by the votes of his wife while she was a county commissioner.

Then, the probable-cause affidavit released last year contended, the couple was living quite lavishly — including spending money on artwork, cruises, vacations to Europe, and a $150,000 home repair project.

Rubin wasn't charged with tax evasion until April of this year.

The State Attorney's Office, however, charged Wasserman-Rubin last year with seven counts of felony unlawful compensation related to her votes for her husband's grant-writing.

Voter Fraud --- WALB

Law enforcement officials have charged 12 people with using absentee ballots to skew an election in Georgia.

"As a result of their grand jury findings, 12 individuals were indicted in that particular matter and we will be trying that case in a court of judicial law instead of a court of public opinion," District Attorney Joe Mulholland told the local TV station, WALB.

The charges followed a bitter November 2010 school board election in Brooks County in which the final tally was changed by an unusually large wave of absentee ballots.

During the election, 1,060 absentee votes were cast out of the 1,403 ballots mailed out to people who requested them, according to a July 2010 report by WCTV.

That's far higher than nearby Thomas County, which had 119 absentee votes cast out of 202 requests, and Lowndes County, which had 169 absentee votes cast out of 439 requests, said WCTV's report.

The 12 people charged are aligned with the Democratic Party.

News of the arrests followed The Daily Caller's interview with former Alabama Democratic Rep. Artur Davis, in which he said voter identification laws are needed to counter ballot fraud in local elections.

The crazy bill out of nuclear energy in Germany

The industrial group Siemens estimates the total cost between 1400 and 1700 billion by 2030.

The number is staggering: 1.7 trillion euros in 2030. This is the high end - calculated by Siemens - the cost to Germany of its programmed output of nuclear power. The industrial giant, which has just formalize this estimate, said as soon as the investments to compensate for the abandonment of the atom will be the responsibility "of either the customer or the taxpayer."

The calculation of Siemens comes almost a year after the catastrophe of Fukushima: this accident is the cause of the decision in May, Chancellor Angela Merkel for a phasing out of nuclear power by the year 2022: 8 reactors 17 have already been arrested. Last September, Siemens has therefore decided to move on nuclear, with the abandonment of specific technologies for this industry.

Before him, the German utility RWE had also calculated the cost of the output of the atom, "only" 250 to 300 billion euros. On the other industry, the huge difference is due to the method. Siemens took into account all the elements: replacement of nuclear power by other means of production, development of networks and especially the dismantling of existing ...

Dismantling sites

In energy, this figure of 1.7 trillion euros is almost unrivaled. In comparison, the European energy market Capgemini fixed to 1000 billion euros the amount of investment needed at European level by 2020 - in power plants, electricity grids and pipelines - to meet rising consumer needs and replacement of facilities at the end of life.

"In general, it is very difficult to calculate exactly a specific deadline the cost of phasing out nuclear power, says Colette Lewiner, director of international energy and utilities sector at Capgemini. The position is very important that the decommissioning of Units will vary significantly depending on the decommissioning strategy and duration of operations, which can run over several decades. "

According to Colette Lewiner, it would be very simplistic, arguing that the nuclear share in electricity production is three times higher in France than in Germany, Siemens triple the estimates to assess the cost of nuclear power in our country. "From one country to another, each energy policy will be different. In the case of France, it should accurately assess the financial burden of investments in alternative energy and in the adaptation of the network. "

The debate is encrypted far from over. For Germany, Bernard Laponche, the anti-nuclear Global Chance Association, explains that "this country, with its nuclear and coal-aging, would in any case had to invest heavily in energy."

Sunni-backed leader: Crisis tearing Iraq apart

BAGHDAD (AP) — Iraq needs new leaders to prevent the country from disintegrating, the leader of the main Sunni-backed bloc said Wednesday, reflecting the severity of a sectarian political battle in the Shiite-led government, accompanied by violence, just a month after the exit of U.S. forces.

The leader of the Iraqiya bloc, Ayad Allawi, was responding to a bold step by Shiite Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, issuing an arrest warrant against the nation's top Sunni official, sending him into virtual internal exile.

"Iraq is at a crossroads and I say that Iraq needs forgiving leaders, who will raise above their personal hatred," Allawi told a new conference in Baghdad, accusing the government of stoking sectarian tensions to divert attention from its failures.

Last month, al-Maliki's government issued an arrest warrant against Sunni Vice President Tareq al-Hashemi, charging he ran death squads that targeted Shiite officials. In protest, Iraqiya began boycotting parliament and Cabinet sessions. On Tuesday the remaining Cabinet ministers suspended the Sunni-backed members until they end their boycott.

Al-Hashemi denied charges and fled to the autonomous Kurdish region in Iraq, out of reach of authorities in Baghdad. He is refusing to return for trial in Baghdad.

The political battle coincides with a wave of bombing attacks, most of them targeting Shiites, killing more than 160 people this year. The twin crises have raised fears of a reprise of a conflict five years ago, when heavily armed Shiite and Sunni militias battled each other and brought the nation to the brink of civil war.

On Wednesday, security forces detained another senior Sunni official, authorities said in Baghdad. Riyadh al-Adhath, the deputy president of Baghdad's Provincial Council and a member of the Iraqi Islamic Party, was taken into custody on Wednesday morning on terrorism charges, the Council said.

Allawi accused al-Maliki of unfairly targeting Sunni officials and deliberately triggering a political crisis that is tearing Iraq apart. Allawi said Iraq needs a new prime minister or new elections.

"This is not the country that we fought the dictatorship for ... (and) not the democracy and freedom that we made sacrifices for," said Allawi, who served as prime minister in the government the U.S. formed after toppling Saddam Hussein's regime in 2003.

If it prefers not to call an election, Allawi said, al-Maliki's "National Alliance bloc should name a new prime minister," who will respect the U.S.-brokered power-sharing agreement that enabled the formation of the current government after months of political bargaining following an inconclusive parliamentary election in March 2010.

The government crisis has intensified sectarian resentments that have remained raw in Iraq since the 2003 U.S.-led invasion unleashed fierce fighting between Sunni and Shiite militias battling for dominance and killing tens of thousands civilians on both sides of the sectarian divide just a few years ago.

Attacks have surged since the last U.S. troops left Dec. 18.

On Wednesday, suspected insurgents killed a member of the government-allied Sunni militia along with three of his sons in the city of Latifiyah, about 20 miles (30 kilometers) south of Baghdad.

In Baghdad, police officials said a mortar round landed near the Turkish Embassy in the northeastern part of the capital. There were no casualties.

Democrats receive more Bain Capital dollars than Republicans

By Alexander Bolton

- 01/19/12 05:30 AM ET

Democrats have accepted more political donations than Republicans from executives at Bain Capital, complicating the left's plan to attack Mitt Romney for his record at the private equity firm.

During the last three election cycles, Bain employees have given Democratic candidates and party committees more than $1.2 million. The vast majority of that sum came from senior executives.

Republican candidates and party committees raised over $480,000 from senior Bain executives during that time period.

Recipients include Democratic senators facing tough reelection races this year, such as Jon Tester (Mont.), Claire McCaskill (Mo.), Sherrod Brown (Ohio) and Bill Nelson (Fla.).

The Hill reviewed contributions made from the 2008, 2010 and 2012 cycles.

Romney has collected more money from Bain Capital employees than any federal candidate since the beginning of 2007, amassing more than $166,000 in contributions. He took more than $84,000 from Bain employees in the first three quarters of 2011.

But President Obama received a sizable share as well. He has accepted more than $80,000 from Bain employees since the beginning of 2007. Bain Capital employees gave $27,500 to Obama during the first three quarters of 2011.

The donations were reported to the Federal Election Commission and culled in a database created by the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonpartisan group that tracks federal campaign spending.

Obama does not accept money from lobbyists, but does accept donations from Wall Street executives. Campaign finance records show that Democrats collect more money from Wall Street than does the GOP.

The sums collected by Democrats from managing partners and other senior executives at Bain could hamper the Democratic message that Romney is a corporate raider who does not care about workers, charges based on his record as CEO of Bain.

Democrats could be forced to justify attacking Bain — which specializes in buying companies and boosting profitability, often by laying off workers — while accepting campaign funds from the same executives who made the cost-cutting decisions.

"They're going to have a difficult time explaining why they're padding their war chest with contributions from the same executives that they're accusing of hurting jobs," said Brian Walsh, a spokesman for the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Democratic strategists disagree.

"What you have with Romney and Bain is a kid stuck with his hand in the cookie jar. There's no question he had direct involvement in thousands of people losing their jobs and in some cases their homes," said David Di Martino, a Democratic strategist. "That's different than company executives at an investment fund making contributions to Democrats.”

Republican presidential candidates, most notably former Speaker Newt Gingrich (Ga.), have led the charge in ripping Romney about his tenure at Bain. But Democratic leaders have also criticized Romney’s record in the private sector, and liberal operatives say it will be a major theme of the 2012 election if he wins the GOP nomination.

“Mitt Romney, I think, is more of a job cremator than a job creator,” Democratic National Committee Chairwoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz said on a conference call with reporters earlier this month. “He was a corporate-buyout specialist at Bain Capital. He dismantled companies. He cut jobs. He forced companies into bankruptcy and he outsourced jobs and sent jobs overseas.”

Meanwhile, Rep. James Clyburn (S.C.), the assistant House Democratic leader, last week held a conference call on Romney’s record at which he criticized Bain for closing a photo-album factory in Gaffney, S.C.

Despite the donations from Bain officials to Democrats, Romney is clearly on the defensive, according to Darrell West, director of governance studies at the Brookings Institution.

He said Obama will be able to use the bully pulpit to steer the national conversation.

“The president will be focusing on job impact instead of campaign contributions,” said West. Republicans have already tried to make campaign donations an issue in battleground states. The Montana Republican Party ran television ads in the fall criticizing Tester from accepting more than $200,000 in contributions from lobbyists.

Tester received a $2,500 contribution from Joshua Beckenstein, a managing director at Bain Capital, in June of last year, according to a fundraising report.

McCaskill received $2,500 from Beckenstein in March and $5,000 from Jonathan Lavine, a Bain Capital investor, in June.

Lavine also gave $1,000 to Brown in May of 2010, and $2,500 to Sen. Robert Menendez (D-N.J.) in September of last year. Over the last three cycles, he gave nearly $90,000 to the Democratic National Committee, $78,000 to the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee and $25,000 to sitting Democratic senators.

As of Dec. 21, fundraising reports show Bain employees gave $123,000 to the Democratic National Committee in 2011, according to the Center for Responsive Politics.

The Democratic fundraising advantage, however, was offset by at least $750,000 that Bain Capital employees gave to Restore Our Future, a pro-Romney super-PAC, in 2011.

Paul Edgerley, an investor at Bain Capital, gave $500,000 to Restore our Future in May. But Edgerly also donated to former Sen. Chris Dodd (Conn.), who recently served as Democratic chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

In April and June, he gave two $2,500 contributions to Alan Khazei, a Democrat who was vying to take on Sen. Scott Brown (R-Mass.). Khazei has since dropped out and endorsed Elizabeth Warren for the Senate Democratic nomination.

In the 2010 cycle, many Bain executives also gave to Steve Pagliuca (D), a managing director at Bain who sought to fill former Sen. Edward Kennedy’s (D-Mass.) seat but lost in the primary.

We have found though that Atlanta radio station <http://www.project961.com/main.html>, WKLS Atlanta <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/WKLS> to be in violation of its own policies when it comes to political lobbying, openly supporting Obama at times and running anti-Christian ads during the same time Christian churches exploded in Nigeria:

- instead of just playing rock music, the staff of the station below have broken their own company's rules concerning compliance with FCC standards,

As follows:

- Romney by hiding gains off Bain Capital,
- offshore accounts connected to Mitt Romney,

- http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mitt_Romney, he has lied to the I.R.S. about his tenure at Bain, costing 15,000 jobs to be lost.

After the Tea Party emailed the FCC and public relations from Clear Channel stating that they would begin boycotting Project961 and any products advertised, in receiving no response, ABC picked up the story to investigate it further:

DAMON CLINICAL LABORATORIES

Romney Was Board Member Of Company Fined Over $100 Million For Medicare Fraud --

At The Time, It Was The Largest Criminal Fine For Health Care Fraud In History

Romney Sat On Board Of Damon Clinical Laboratories, A Bain Capital Portfolio Company

Fined Nearly $120 Million In 1996 Due To Medicare Fraud. "A Needham clinical laboratory agreed yesterday to pay $119 million in criminal and civil fines after pleading guilty to charges that it defrauded the nation's Medicare system by seeking reimbursements on millions of dollars worth of unnecessary blood tests. ... Damon Clinical Laboratories Inc. admitted it tried to boost its profits by submitting the unnecessary tests. The company, the government said, misled doctors into ordering the tests, ensuring that they would be covered by Medicare, the federal health care program for the elderly." (Kimberly Blanton, "Needham Lab Fined $ 119m For Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/96)

. At The Time, Largest Criminal Fine In Massachusetts History: "The settlement ... would mark the largest criminal fine ever levied in Massachusetts." (Kimberly Blanton, "Needham Lab Fined $ 119m For Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/96)

. At The Time, Largest Health Care Fraud Criminal Fine In History: "The $35.3 million criminal fine in the Damon case, one piece of the $119 million total settlement, is the largest ever recovered in a health care fraud case." (Kimberly Blanton, "Needham Lab Fined $ 119m For Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/96)

Romney Was On Damon's Board Of Directors While The Fraud Took Place – He Initially Claimed He Was Unaware Of Any Criminal Investigation. "Mitt Romney, former Republican challenger to US Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who was a member of Damon's board, said he was unaware of any investigation. ... Romney said that [Damon's then-CEO Robert] Rosen told the board in about 1992 'that all current practices at the company were now in conformity with government regulations and that in the past there may have been practices which would not be deemed appropriate.'" (Kimberly Blanton, "Needham Lab Fined $ 119m For Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/96)

. "Made Large Profits ... From A Criminal Scheme To Fraudulently Bill The Federal Medicare System..."

"[Romney] and his venture capital firm made large profits from the 1993 sale of a Needham medical testing company whose robust revenues were generated in part from a criminal scheme to fraudulently bill the federal Medicare system for unnecessary blood tests." (Frank Phillips, "Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/02)

. "Pure And Simple ... Corporate Greed Run Amok." "Damon Corp. pleaded guilty in 1996 to a federal conspiracy charge of defrauding the government of $25 million between 1988 and 1993. It paid a record $119 million fine and penalty for a scheme that then-US Attorney Donald Stern labeled 'a case, pure and simple, of corporate greed run amok.'" (Frank Phillips, "Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud," The Boston Globe, 10/10/02)

1993: Immediately Following Acquisition By Corning, Damon Closed Plant In Needham Heights, Laid Off 115 Massachusetts Workers. "Republican businessman Mitt Romney ... helped direct a Massachusetts medical diagnostics company toward a merger that resulted in the permanent closure of a Needham Heights plant and layoffs of about 115 Massachusetts workers. Damon Corp. was headquartered in Massachusetts for more than 30 years until it was purchased by Corning Inc. in 1993 and the Needham facility was closed. ... The day after the merger with Corning was completed, the new company notified the Massachusetts Department of Employment and Training that it was permanently closing the Needham plant and laying off about 115 people.” (Meg Vaillancourt, “Romney-Aided Deal Closed Damon Plant,” The Boston Globe, 10/9/94)

. Romney “Feared” The Massachusetts Layoffs Would Come, But Voted To Approve Deal Anyway. “As a board member, Romney pointed out he had a legally binding ‘fiduciary responsibility’ to get the best deal he could for the shareholders, though he acknowledged that at the time he feared Corning would close down the plant and lay off the Massachusetts employees. ... No one met Corning’s tender offer, which Romney described as ‘stunning.’ He said he voted to accept the offer, as did the vast majority of other shareholders. ‘There was nothing I could do.’” (Meg Vaillancourt, “Romney-Aided Deal Closed Damon Plant,” The Boston Globe, 10/9/94)

As A Gubernatorial Candidate, Romney Claimed He Helped “Uncover” And Stop The Fraud At Damon.

“[R]omney said Thursday he helped uncover the fraud at Damon and hired an outside law firm to investigate it.

‘We took action based on what was told to us by the law firm,’ Romney said ...” (Ron DePasquale, “Romney Downplays Report He Profited From Firm Tied To Fraud,” The Associated Press, 10/10/02)

. Romney Tries To Take Credit: “Mr. Romney said yesterday that he aided in uncovering and stopping the fraud one year before the sale. ... Mr. Romney said board members, including himself ... had started an inquiry that led to the disclosure.” (John Monahan, “Ex-Presidents Stump For O’Brien, Romney,” Telegram & Gazette [Worcester, MA], 10/11/02)

. “Romney Has Said He Helped Uncover The Fraud But Never Reported It To Authorities.” (Tom Benner, “O’Brien Sees Savings Possible In Budget,” The Patriot Ledger [Quincy, MA], 10/23/02)

Federal Investigators Rebuffed Romney’s Claims. Saying The Fraud Continued Until Bain And Other Owners Sold Damon To Corning In 1993. “A spokesman for Romney, Eric Fehrstrom, said Thursday that Romney and other board members helped uncover the fraud at Damon after similar fraudulent practices were found at another laboratory in 1992. ... But court records, including statements by prosecutors and by Damon officials, indicated that the fraud continued until Corning purchased the firm. Prosecutors gave Corning sole credit for cleaning up the fraud.” (“Report: Mass. Candidate Romney Profited From Sale Of Firm That Later Admitted Medicare Fraud,” The Associated Press, 10/10/02)

. “Federal Officials ... Have Disputed Mr. Romney’s Claim That He Helped Stop And Correct The Practice.” “Mr. Romney was a director from 1990 to 1993 and said he and the board of directors learned of the problem in 1993 when its own legal staff investigated the billings. Federal officials who prosecuted the case have disputed Mr. Romney’s claim that he helped stop and correct the practice, saying the company did not report the fraud to federal authorities and the practice was stopped by the company’s new owners after it was sold.” (John Monahan, “Romney Talks To Crowd At Fallon,” Telegram & Gazette [Worcester, MA], 10/12/02)

. “No Corrective Action Was Taken When Romney Was On The Board...” “In the 1996 settlement, records show the [fraud] scheme was carried out between 1988 and the time that Damon was sold, indicating that no corrective action was taken when Romney was on the board and served as a member of its strategic planning committee.” (Frank Phillips, “Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud,” The Boston Globe, 10/10/02)

. Officials Gave Corning Sole Credit For Cleaning Up Damon’s Fraudulent Practices.

“[C]ourt documents

– and Damon’s admission – reveal that the fraudulent activity was occurring right up until the time Corning purchased the company from Bain and other owners. ... [D]amon’s filings with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission during the weeks and months just prior to the sale contain no mention of possible legal problems over its billing system, or potential negative impact that would require downward revenue revisions.” (Frank Phillips, “Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud,” The Boston Globe, 10/10/02) “Damon’s Activities Cost US Taxpayers Nearly $40 Million, The Government Said.” (Kimberly Blanton, “Needham Lab Fined $ 119m For Fraud,” The Boston Globe, 10/10/96)

Romney Personal Profit From Bain’s Sale Of Damon: More Than $470,000. “Republican gubernatorial candidate Mitt Romney and his venture capital firm made large profits from the 1993 sale of a Needham medical testing company whose robust revenues were generated in part from a criminal scheme to fraudulently bill the federal Medicare system for unnecessary blood tests. Romney personally made $473,000 when Corning Inc. purchased Damon Corp., on whose board he served between 1990 and 1993.” (Frank Phillips, “Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud,” The Boston Globe, 10/10/02)

. Romney Earned Nearly $40,000 In Directors’ Fees Alone. “Romney’s firm, Bain Capital, and Romney himself were minority investors in Damon from 1990 through August 1993. The Belmont businessman sat on Damon’s board of directors, earning nearly $40,000 in directors’ fees, and was a member of the company’s strategic planning committee when Damon was sold to Corning.” (Meg Vaillancourt, “Romney-Aided Deal Closed Damon Plant,” The Boston Globe, 10/9/94)

Bain Capital Tripled Its Investment On The Deal: “[Romney’s] firm, Bain Capital, tripled its initial investment, making a profit of $7.4 million over a four-year period for its investors, according to copies of Bain documents obtained by the Globe.” (Frank Phillips, “Romney Profited On Firm Later Tied To Fraud,” The Boston Globe, 10/10/02)

Romney “Proud” Of Role With Damon. “‘I’m proud of the small part I played in the growth of Damon,’ Romney said yesterday. ‘It’s something that Ted Kennedy doesn’t have a clue about – creating real jobs in the private sector.’” (Meg Vaillancourt, “Romney-Aided Deal Closed Damon Plant,” The Boston Globe, 10/9/94)

Anticorruption Laws

Conducting business with governments is not the same as conducting business with private parties. What may be considered an acceptable practice in the private business sector may be improper or illegal when dealing with government officials. Improper or illegal payments to government officials are prohibited. "Government officials" includes employees of any government anywhere in the world, even low-ranking employees or employees of government-controlled entities, as well as political parties and candidates for political office. If you deal with such persons or entities, you should consult with our Legal Department to be sure that you understand these laws before providing anything of value to a government official.

3 If you are involved in transactions with foreign government officials, you must comply not only with the laws of the country with which you are involved but also with the U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act. This act makes it illegal to pay, or promise to pay money or anything of value to any government official for the purpose of directly or indirectly obtaining or retaining business. This ban on illegal payments and bribes also applies to agents or intermediaries who use funds for purposes prohibited by the statute.

In some countries it is permissible to pay government employees for performing certain required duties. These facilitating payments, as they are known, are small sums paid to facilitate or expedite routine, non-discretionary government actions, such as obtaining phone service or an ordinary license. In contrast, a bribe, which is never permissible, is giving or offering to give anything of value to a government official to influence a discretionary decision. Understanding the difference between a bribe and a facilitating payment is very important. You must have approval from our Legal Department before making any payment or gift to a foreign government official.

FCC Regulations

Our radio and television broadcasting operations are subject to federal and state laws, as well as regulations issued by the Federal Communications Commission. All of our broadcast operations shall comply with all applicable laws and regulations. Two particular areas of regulation raise special areas of concern: payola, and the related issues of plugola and sponsorship identification, and indecent and obscene content.

Payola, and the practices of plugola and proper sponsorship identification, describe related kinds of prohibited broadcasting activities, all of which are serious violations of federal law. Payola occurs when an individual (as opposed to the station) receives money or anything of value to broadcast a song, show, or a statement of any sort, without the sponsorship being mentioned. Plugola occurs when a station employee broadcasts something of financial interest to him/herself, without disclosing that interest. Plugola is similar to payola, except that it need not involve an outside party or payment of any kind. Sponsorship identification rules are similar in concept to payola, but require the station/company (as opposed to individuals) to provide on-air disclosure of any arrangement under which it receives money or anything of value to broadcast a song, show, or a statement of any sort, without the sponsorship being mentioned.

FCC regulations prohibit the broadcast of indecent material at any time other than between the "safe harbor" hours of 10:00 p.m. to 6:00 a.m. FCC rules prohibit the broadcast of obscene programming at any time. Each violation of the FCC's indecency rules may result in substantial monetary fines, and may provide the basis for non-renewal of a station's license or other harsh regulatory sanctions. In addition, the FCC has demonstrated its willingness to find licensees liable for repeated violations during a single program. In its decisions, the FCC has consistently defined an indecent broadcast as one that includes: language or material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs. Obscene content has been defined as material which an average person, applying contemporary community standards, finds, as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest, depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by applicable law and taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

Additional information concerning these issues can be found on the company's intranet, or may be obtained directly from the Legal Department. If you have any questions concerning any issues related to laws and regulations regarding broadcast operations, including regulations regarding payola, plugola, sponsorship identification or the broadcast of indecent or obscene material, you should consult with our Legal Department.

Re: CIMS00003298393 - FOLLOW-UP TO INFORMAL COMPLAINT TO THE FCC FOR VIOLATION OF STATION LICENSE:

The crime was not on the internet: they broadcasted hate-filled anti-Christian ads while 5 churches blew up, on the radio, the day that it happened on CHRISTMAS DAY, during their evening broadcast, when no one was at the station.

It was a robo-ad for the morning show, which they have refused to apologize for, nor has Clear Channel apologized, as we were only seeking a written apology, no monetary suit or calumny:

- They mocked Jesus, calling Him 'Baby J' as Modern Day Jesus, dispensing advice for women to become strippers to support themselves and for men who had impregnated a woman who was not his wife, to have an abortion.
- It was two separate ads, or skits, advertising the morning show, followed by injections of: "HAPPY/MERRY CHRIS-MA-HANU-KWANZA"

If you don't strip Project961/Atlanta's radio station of their license, we will make sure that they don't have the money to pay for it: or we will hit their investors in the pocket, by refusing to buy their advertised products.

Starting with Clear Channel and affiliates... because that doesn't cost us to pay for a lawsuit, but we have the choice to boycott the station and anything associated with it.

Bill Maher goes too far this time.... oh and Project961.com ran ads mocking Jesus on Christmas, the day of the bombing of 5 Catholic Churches, in which they called him "Baby J" as a Modern day Jesus, who counseled women to become strippers instead of learning how to fish to survive, and who counseled men who had impregnated a woman that they weren't married to, to pay for an abortion. Not only was it disrespectful to all Christians, it was near blasphemy to discredit Jesus and misrepresent him in such a way. It also used no discretion to run the ads while no one would be manning the radio station or when the FCC would not be in town. Then to have recorded the ads, and to automatically robo-play them when 5 churches in Nigeria were bombed, equally devastating and worth reviling.

INFORMAL COMPLAINT TO THE FCC FOR VIOLATION OF STATION LICENSE:

I am all for free speech, but there are consequences for free speech: while one may freely criticize a religion, or take position against it, or take issue on religious beliefs, Project961 is not a religious entity or authority, just a rock music station.

There is a point when a license to operate and use free speech crosses the line to provocation: when use of that licensure becomes insulting, defamatory, an issuance of lies for use of indoctrination or propaganda.

People have a choice whether or not to read my newsletter, attend my political gatherings, and align themselves with me. When listening to the radio, we don't have a choice to turn the dial if we want to listen to the music, without the diatribe that accompanies it. I also believe it to be a gross misrepresentation of the musicians and artists whose work these DJ's use to make a living, playing their music on the air and detracting from it in the process.

Let the music speak for itself and just play the music... how hard is that? There is a problem when I would want to stop listening to the music I love, so that I don't have to hear the disrespectful, rude, and intrusive opinions over top of it, souring the music.

I understand that this station has problems paying for its license, and that it is up for review.

Here are some examples of why they are in violation of their broadcasting license, because of several DJ's at the station: Kidd Chris, Thomas, and Aly.

While it is not every DJ who works at the station, these DJ's are hurting the station with their personal feelings on politics or religion injected into their shows, broadcasts, and advertising for the station.

I recommend that these DJ's seek other employment, because they are ruining the station. I would ask that they send a written apology via email, or Atlanta listeners will boycott the entire show. These DJ's are poisoning the music program, with their attitude or by the advertisements with their show. What was an exhibition of free speech has become a prolonged display of disrespect for the listeners.

NOT SATISFIED WITH CLEAR CHANNEL'S FAILED EFFORTS TO CONTROL THE ELECTION WITH A CONTRIVED ROMNEY LEAD, ERICK ERICKSON TURNS ON PERRY, TO MANIPULATE SUPPORT FOR NEWT, AS THE TEA PARTY EXTENDS THE BOYCOTT TO COVER wsbradio.com

Hero or Spoiler: Rick Perry Will Quit. The Question is as What.

Yesterday, I argued that Rick Perry should leave the GOP primary in advance of Saturday's election and endorse Newt Gingrich, who is the most logical fit in the existing field for a Perry endorsement.

The Perry campaign responded that the race would be decided by voters, not pundits behind a computer.

Fair enough. Rick Perry does not want to be seen as a quitter. But quit he will. I do not want him to quit. I urged him to stay in the race. But sadly his campaign has been unable to get the second look I thought it deserved. Now, at this point, he and I both know he is going to quit the race. The only question is whether he quits now and saves us from Romney or quits Sunday and ensures us Romney.

It may suck, but it is reality. And we are forced at times like this to deal with reality. The reality is that Rick Perry will be quitting the race, but he is not quitting the fight, which has always been more important. We started campaign season with candidates asking what Washington can do for America. Through his singlehanded, tireless, and unfailing efforts, Rick Perry has managed to steer the conversation to what Washington cannot do for America and what Americans can do themselves if Washington just gets the hell out of the way.

Without Rick Perry in the race, that would never have happened. But sadly, at this point, with Rick Perry in the race the people most likely to campaign and govern with Perry's conviction to make Washington as inconsequential in our lives as possible have no chance. For Rick Perry's vision of America to win — something we should all want — Rick Perry must depart the race now.

If Obama Loses in 2012, US Will Have Free and Slave States, Says Top Abortion Provider

Filed under 2012 ELECTION, ABORTION, CULTURE, HEALTH CARE, LIBERALISM, POLITICS

Merle Hoffman is president and CEO of Choices Women's Medical Center, one of the largest women's health and abortion clinics in the United States. She has been actively involved in women's health issues since 1971 and now serves as publisher and editor-in-chief of On The Issues Magazine.

Next to the members of the US Supreme Court that ruled in favor of abortion in the Roe v Wade case, probably no other person in the United States has been involved with the premeditated murder of more unborn children than Hoffman has.

On Tuesday, Hoffman appeared at The National Press Club where she told everyone that if any of the Republican candidates get elected and repeal Roe v Wade, that the country will end up with free states that provide abortion and slave states that do not.

Hoffman uses a statistic stating that 73% of women having abortions are doing so for economic reasons. She makes it sound like this is a fair representation of the general public, but is it? What she doesn't say is how many of the women seeking abortions are married verses unmarried. How many of them are in their teens and are getting abortions without parental knowledge or permission? What percentages of abortions were for women who are drug addicts, alcoholics or prostitutes?

She speaks of the formation of an underground railway to help pregnant women travel from slave states to free states so they can murder their unborn child. She purposely uses an analogy of slavery in pre-Civil War America in order to invoke a reaction to all of the Republican Candidates.

If Hoffman was sincere about equating abortion with slavery, she should realize that what she and other pro-abortion advocates are doing to unborn children is no different than what slave owners did to their slaves. The very thought of that should help blacks especially to understand the injustice and inhumanity of abortion.

In both slavery and abortion, you have an innocent person who is not free to make choices for themselves. They are treated as nothing more than another's possession, to be used and disposed of as the owner wants. Both of them are cruel and inhumane and both are wrong!

Thousands of Americans died in the effort to outlaw slavery and give an oppressed people their freedom. One hundred and fifty years later, blacks still talk about slavery and the oppression that some find themselves still experiencing. They talk about how precious the freedom from slavery and oppression is.

Slave owners use to say that they have a right to their slave's body and the slaves have no rights. Today, liberals say that women have the right to their body and the unborn has no rights.

What's the difference? There is none. Both are morally wrong! One was stopped. When will we put a stop to the other?

WILCOX COUNTY, Ga. -- Nearly 200 Department of Corrections officers flooded the gates of Wilcox State Prison Wednesday morning, marking the beginning of an unannounced raid.

The DOC's special operations team performs shakedowns at each of the state's 31 prison facilities, searching each cell for weapons and other contraband, including cell phones.

RELATED: Cell phones in prison called an "epidemic"

Even prison warden Robert Toole was caught off guard, notified only ten minutes before the group's arrival.

"I welcome it," Toole said. "Anytime I can have additional staff. These guys are highly trained, highly motivated."

Each of the prison's 1,862 inmates were strip searched, then removed from their cells and placed in a holding room. Officers then entered two at a time, sometimes accompanied by a member of the K-9 unit.

By the end of the shakedown, officers had confiscated 32 cell phones, 21 weapons and small amounts of marijuana and meth. Most of the items were well hidden: behind walls, in ceilings or inside of a broken sink.

RELATED: Official warns of phone smuggling in prisons

Officers said some contraband, like homemade alcohol, is relatively harmless. They said their biggest focus is finding and removing cell phones. Toole said they are just as dangerous as weapons.

"Once that one cell phone makes it in, it just opens up the flood gates," he said. "It allows inmates to communicate, to carry on criminal activity outside the walls. It allows inmates to intimidate possible witnesses."

This is the first surprise shakedown for Wilcox State Prison. The visits are always unannounced to prevent inmates, and in some cases, guards, from getting rid of illegal items.
