

Zixuan Zheng , Andy

Dr.J.Marquardt

ENG1430 W10

Mar. 17th

Word Count: 252

A moving transition with tears

What I chose is a well-known film named “The Pursuit of Happiness”. This film describes a story about Chris Gardner who lived a poor life on the verge of bankruptcy gradually became a stockbroker with million dollars. His wife ran away from home, leaving their son with Chris alone. Chris Gardner was a salesman and very poor. He worked harder to become a stockbroker working in Dean Witter, a stock company. He got over all problems derived from economic pressure and social competition.

This movie is actually a kind of Cinderella story. This movie has a essential helper existing all the time. His lovely small son encouraged Chris whenever Chris felt upset. He supported Chris mentally, inspiring him to success. This helper is just alike in Cinderella stories. They all helped heroes to acquire a happy ending. The second element is obvious. At the end of movie, there was a transformation. Chris went through his internship and stood out of twenty persons. When his boss said, “ So, welcome !” , the eyes of this strong-willed man were filled with tears. It’s a really moving transformation and made people believe that the happiness already knocked at the door by working harder. At same time, the transformation of Cinderella was just the same in some ways.. They all had much virtue, just like warm-heart, strong-willed. Finally, Chris had a happy ending. He became a brilliant and outstanding stockbroker with million dollars. Living happily ever after is an indispensable characteristic part in Cinderella story.

Reference List:

Gabriele Muccino, & Steve Conrad, (2006) ,The Pursuit of Happiness.[DVD]. United States: Columbia Pictures . <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SIZKoak6gp8>