

Final Persuasive Transcript:

It is my position that kids should not get paid to go to school. I believe if you pay for attendance kids don't have the joy for learning, they will just want money.

My first point is, if children don't enjoy learning and going to school, they will cheat at school to still get money. According to Kids Health, some children cheat because they are lazy and want good grades without spending time studying. This can lead to negative feelings like embarrassment.

Secondly, I strongly believe students only want to learn because of the rewards. They will not be interested in learning, without rewards.

Finally, the website Connected.org, says students will work for money but will settle for average results when the pay stops. Their hard work will be gone.
