A shown in this picture below, I have just finished demonstrating to a student how to complete a crunch, and am now showing the student proper form of a crunch. This particular student was having trouble holding his feet down which of course eliminates most of the strain on your core muscles. With me holding down his feet he was able to focus on the motion of the crunch opposed to focusing on keeping his feet down.

