INTRODUCTION

[radio voice 1] Ladies and gentlemen, as we prepare for signal transmission, please make sure your seats are positioned comfortably, your tray tables are in their full upright position, and your listening devices are secure. Our transmission of global ambient music will begin shortly. Thank you for choosing the Stolace Relay Station, and enjoy your trip.

[radio voice 2] Five, four, three, two, one. Lift off.

[radio voice 4] Nice to be in orbit.

Transmission sequence # 4.07

Welcome friends and travelers to The STOLACE Relay Station — broadcasting global ambient and atmospheric signals to the furthest reaches of our solar system. If your current conditions permit it, close your eyes, lean back, and enjoy these original ambient sounds.

In this transmission, we're pausing for a moment of quiet reflection as we approach the winter solstice, celebrating it with love, light, and life. Our theme on the program is music that helps set the scene for this contemplative time of year. Our featured artist on the program is Kate Moore from the Netherlands. We also feature the brand new album from Polish composer and pianist Hania Rani

Plus the music of Ceramic, Sherry Finzer, Ocoeur, and more.

Strap in and make yourself comfortable, Join us for the next hour, on the Stolace Relay Station.

FEATURE ARTIST SEGMENT: Kate Moore

My featured artist on the program is an absolute treat to listen to and I feel enriched for having crossed paths with their music. Kate Moore is an internationally acclaimed composer and pianist with an impressive catalog of achievements, awards and the like — but what seems more interesting to me is the picturesque tapestries she creates from one phrase to the next, through dramatic swells of emotive melodies, to long strands of tension and free-spirited whimsey in every note and dynamic change.

The track we're featuring comes from Kate Moore's latest avant garde album, a collection of works written around the concept of connecting memory of places and sensory experience. The album links these works with her deep fascination for the natural forces that shape the world, and her ability to articulate it and express it through her music. From her album "Ridgeway", here's Kate Moore with the track "Prelude".

FEATURE ALBUM SEGMENT

Hania Rani will always have a soft spot in my heart — my first encounter with her music was five years ago on Piano Day with her tender composition "Today It Came". Tender is one good word for her music, but I'm afraid it's incomplete, particularly when you immerse yourself in her latest full-length release "Ghosts". Her delicate sensibilities are deeply enchanting, like finding yourself in a dream, each moment evocative as the next in an ever unfolding fairy tale. For the discerning listener, this is an exploratory album that immaculately transforms a quiet moment alone into your own folktale steeped in wonder and curiosity. "Ghosts" is available now on most streaming music services, as well as at <https://haniarani.bandcamp.com>.

Let's check out one of the tracks on this enchanting album. From her 2023 album "Ghosts", here's Hania Rani with the track "The Boat" here on The Stolace Relay Station.
