

Convergence Games Showcase – 16th July 2026

Where your favourite creators and the best new indie games collide

We're changing the face of game showcases because, let's face it – change is needed.

On 16th July, the second Convergence Games Showcase of 2026, will bring creators together to co-host two hours of indie-game reveals, live across Twitch and YouTube.

They'll watch, react and even play the best new games live, all direct from their own channels and with the support of their amazing communities.

Every year, thousands of indie games are made by talented teams who don't have the megabucks needed to find players. So our specialist editorial team go sifting for diamonds and, with the help of our friends in the streaming community, share them with the world.

Confirmed as hosts again are your favourite streaming creators Dodger and Jesse Cox, with a raft of co-host talent to be announced to join the worldwide watch party.

In previous shows, we've had the likes of top-tier creators CohhCarnage, ChilledChaos, Limealicious, Gothalion and Forsen helping such standout titles as Mouse Pl: For Hire, Shadows of Doubts, Denshattack!, and so many more to get the attention and love that they deserve.

Since its inception in 2024, Convergence has showcased more than 100 games, with total views and minutes watched more than doubling over the course of three events.

And this July it's going even bigger, with dozens more games to discover, covering the full spectrum from solo bedroom devs to established studios, from global exclusive reveals to developer stories that demand telling, all championed by real indie-gaming fans.

To find out which of your favourite streamers will be taking part this year, follow our channels for all the big announcements as and when they happen.

Join the Convergence Games Showcase, live across Twitch and YouTube, on 16th July.
