Ezgender's lists are being transferred to a Wikia that anyone can edit! You can read the notice about this here, or head to the page, which is a lot better - anyone can add to it, it's continually updated by them and by alphabet, and has a lot more flags!

This document has an accompanying Tumblr blog: Everypronoun. Please see the blog for more content. Each pronoun has a tag: For example going into the fae tag shows us flags representing fae and other pronouns, discussions about fae pronouns, examples of using fae in a sentence, and more. (I'm personally working on a project to pronounce pronouns on video to help with pronunciation, but this isn't very complete yet.)

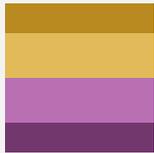

If looking through these doesn't help or is too intimidating, feel free to send me an ask to help you find pronouns. Or, if a pronoun set doesn't have a flag, feel free to request for me to make one.

- ↳ Click here for other miscellaneous pronoun-related identities \(pronoun hoarding, etc\).

Example

Here is the template that I use for each pronoun set.

Nominative/Accusative/Pronominal/Predicative/Reflexive

(The pronoun questioning flag is used if I can't find any flags. Click on each flag for source.)

- Nominative: x (x went to the store.)
- Accusative: x (I met x today.)
- Pronominal possessive: x (If x doesn't get a haircut, x hair grows long.)
- Predicative possessive: x (If I need a phone my friend will let me borrow x.)
- Reflexive: x (x has to drive x to school.)

Pronoun type (origin word). First year I can find these pronouns being used (which may not be the year of coining).

Plural flags if any exist, or anything similar. Combination with other pronoun flags if any exist.

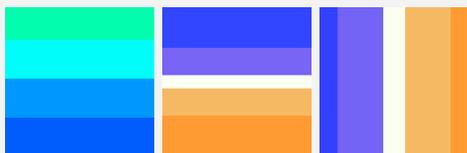

Gender/orientation-themed flags if any exist.

Exipronouns

"Exipronouns" are "standard" pronouns (she/he/they/it); the opposite of neopronouns.

He/him/his/his/himself

- Nominative: He (He is my friend.)
- Accusative: Him (I like to hug him.)
- Pronominal possessive: His (His name is...)
- Predicative possessive: His (That is his.)
- Reflexive: Himself (He thinks to himself.)

Exipronoun. Dated before the 12th century.

He+she flag, alt.

She/her/her/hers/herself

- Nominative: She (She is my friend.)
- Accusative: Her (I like to hug her.)
- Pronominal possessive: Her (Her name is...)
- Predicative possessive: Hers (That is hers.)
- Reflexive: Herself (She thinks to herself.)

Exipronoun. Sometime before 1000; Middle English hire-selfe, Old English hire self.
He+she flag, alt. She+fae flag, \(S\)he/hir/hirs flag.

They/them/their/theirs/themself

- Nominative: They (They are my friend.)
- Accusative: Them (I like to hug them.)
- Pronominal possessive: Their (Their name is...)
- Predicative possessive: Theirs (That is theirs.)
- Reflexive: Themself (They think to themself.)

Exipronoun. 1350–1400.

It/it/its/its/itself

- Nominative: It (It went to the store.)
- Accusative: It (I met it today.)
- Pronominal possessive: Its (If it doesn't get a haircut, its hair grows long.)
- Predicative possessive: Its (If I need a phone my friend will let me borrow its.)
- Reflexive: It (It has to drive itself to school.)

Neopronouns & Nounself Pronouns

Neopronouns are any set of singular third person pronouns that are not officially recognized in the language they are used in, typically created with the intent of being a gender neutral pronoun set.

Nounself pronouns are a variant of neopronouns that are more directly based on words, often nouns, to create pronouns like budself or pupself.

FAQ:

- I found an error!

Contact me and I'll fix it!

- Here's a set of pronouns you don't have listed...

Contact me and I'll add the set! This is highly appreciated.

- I don't think these pronouns are useful, real, or valid. Do people actually use these?

I use pronouns listed here. So do the vast majority of my friends, family, and people in my general social circle! In general, pronoun sets like this wouldn't exist if someone hadn't wanted to conceptualize a pronoun set like these. You can scroll through this blog for links about transgender and nonbinary history, or take a look at this short article about pronouns. People have been inventing new pronouns as needed as long as language has existed.

You can also browse this Carrd for more questions you might have regarding the "validity" of these pronouns.

- Why do pronouns need flags?

Like orientation, gender, kink, country of origin, disability, etc, making and using pronoun flags is another way to represent oneself. Making flags to represent pronoun sets you use is a newer concept, but in the same way as the other kinds of flags I just listed, it's just something done for fun and to show pride, and can also be very important to some people.
