Summary

AZABU HIKAWA SHRINE, AZABU-JUUBAN, MINATO WARD, TOKYO, JAPAN

APRIL 17TH, 1996

To some, it was inevitable.

"You can't do this to me...! I made a promise!"

The rumors about the minister's daughter had been swirling for years. How she was strange, and mysterious. How people once disappeared because of her. The resentment had simmered, it seemed, until it finally boiled over. It was the night of her 18th birthday.

"I'll never accept this destiny...or you! Never!"

"I've had enough of your lies-!"

Now, as the sun rises, the minister's daughter is a suspect in two grueling crimes-the attempted murder of her father, and the horrific death of his fiancée. She knows no one will ever believe her if she ever were to tell the truth about that night.

"I made a choice long ago. If I'm condemned, so be it. I won't break the vow I made..."

As the whole world stands against her, one can only ask...

"Not even to save my life!"

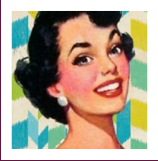

Will love and justice really prevail this time?

Note #1	If present, the detective may be called to testify before, in-between or after other witnesses are heard.
Note #2	Any character with a unique headshot can be improvised in court with available characters on the server! All headshots here are for reference as to what the characters would look like if they did have unique sprite sets on AAO (which they don't)!
Note #3	This trial may involve the use of Psyche-Locks in court , depending on what happens! The witness in question is very deliberately hiding information, and because of certain circumstances, everyone in the courtroom will be able to see the Psyche-Locks, even if they shouldn't normally be able to see it otherwise without a magatama!
Note #4	There is a LOT of information in this case for both sides! Don't stress, take a deep breath and do your best! Remember, especially in Ace Attorney mode where you play the two lawyer protags, you want to try and get the truth. This case as a result may take multiple sessions to play fully! Do your best! I believe in you! :)

Time of Death

Cause of Death

10:18-10:20 PM

Immolation

Additional Information

- The body burned quickly, like it was aided by an accelerant. Estimated time of the body's complete immolation was under one minute.
- What remained of the victim was determined to have been set on fire, leaving mostly ash and some piles of liquified gore.
- There was not enough in terms of intact remains to definitively determine their identity.
- It was impossible to do a postmortem HCG assay due to the condition of the remains. Thus, it was impossible for the coroner to determine if the remains included any fetus, embryo, etc.
- Other tests are pending.

Name

Description

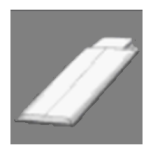

Shrine's Yumi Set/Sacred Flame

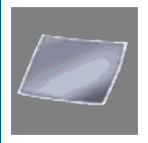

Azabu Hikawa Shrine's ritual set of one bow and 12 arrows. Kept in the inner sanctum along with the Sacred Flame.

The flame is considered the shintogi, or sacred body, of the gods enshrined at the site. The defendant is known to meditate in front of it often.

Put together, the yumi set and the Sacred Flame are considered the murder weapon.

		- The bow was discovered on the ground near the crime scene. It's got something sticky covering it, and scorch marks. - The defendant's fingerprints are also all over it, with several of the prints covered with ash. - Two of the arrows are clearly missing. - The door to the inner sanctum was broken off of its hinges. - There was also a foot-sized hole in it. The size is roughly that of the defendant's feet.
	Birthday Dress	This custom-made dress was worn by the defendant to her birthday dinner. The defendant was also wearing it when the police arrived. - The shawl is covered with burn marks, ash and blood. - The blood was identified as Takashi Hino's. - There is a rip in it, likely from a lily corsage the defendant wore during the birthday party. The flowers were found trampled, ripped and burnt at the crime scene.
	Defendant's Medical Report	Medical report of the defendant, Rei Hino, after the crime. - The defendant was found to have two sets of large, hand-shaped bruises and scratches on her neck. The scratches eventually blistered over. - The defendant reported passing out for several minutes, but waking up before the police arrived.
	Sec. Takashi Hino's Medical Report	Medical report of Takashi Hiro after the crime. Currently he is in the ICU. - A set of two deep and bleeding stab wounds were found on his upper right neck, and a large, deep, bloody gash on his chest. - Seven of his ribs were crushed, and his left lung collapsed. - He sustained second degree burns on his lower right neck and upper right shoulder. - Further tests are being conducted, and results are pending.
	Marriage Contract	A contract for the marriage of Rei Hino and one Daisuke Nagata. The engagement was to be announced April 20th. Found in Takashi Hino's pocket, slightly singed and crumpled up. - It was drawn up by a marriage agency on April 8th. The primary signator was Hiyama Hibiki, with Takashi Hino as a co-signer. - Daisuke Nagata had signed his consent on April 17th. Rei Hino's signature is noticeably absent. - There is a wine stain on the document. The lab has confirmed that it is a local wine served only at the Rain Tree restaurant.
	Takeshi Hino's Last Will and Testament (Pending)	The Chief Cabinet Secretary's most recent version of his will and testament. Found in Takashi Hino's study. Dated April 17th. - It states that in the case of his death, everything that belongs to him will be inherited by Hiyama Hibiki and the son she was expecting. - There is no mention of the defendant in the will. - It was co-signed by Takashi Hino and Hiyama Hibiki, the latter who was assigned the estate's sole executor. - Not yet in effect, as it was not notarized. - Faint fingerprints were found that belong to the defendant and another, unknown party.
	Takashi Hino's Testimony, Full	Testimony taken from the defendant's father as he recovered in the hospital. The prosecution were only able to get it a few hours before trial, and the defense got their testimony at the absolute last minute. - Rei and Hiyama started arguing after he arrived at the shrine. - He remembers something hitting him in the leg, then a flash of fire, then searing heat. - The last thing he remembers are his daughter's eyes, flashing with hate and determination, a fiery arrow notched in her bow.

		The testimony given to the defense was the same, but with an extra detail he'd remembered: just as he passed out, the defendant wasn't wearing her birthday dress, but a short red skirt. He also recalled something biting his neck as well.
	Takashi Hino's Last Will and Testament (Current Version)	The current, and still valid, will of the defendant's father. - The will leaves everything to the defendant if she remained his only offspring; otherwise it would be split evenly by her and any future children Takashi had. - There is no mention of Hiyama Hibiki or her unborn child. - It was signed by Takashi Hino, and notarized by the then-Prime Minister in June of 1989.
	Pregnancy Test	Found in Takashi Hino's office. It's a positive result. Apparently taken by Hibiki Hiyama.
	Map of Azabu-Juuban	A map with a scribbled line leading from Roppongi subway station to the crime scene. It takes twenty minutes to walk, ten minutes by car. Most roads in the area are one-way streets. (Inset of crime scene HERE) It should be noted that Sendai Road, the nearest main drag, would be completely avoided.
	Defendant's Phone	The latest-model (for 1996, at least) cell phone, owned by the defendant. Found on the defendant's bed. - The last message was from 10:01 PM, to an unknown number. It simply said: I have to stop her. I have no choice anymore. Please do not interfere; I have to do this alone. - All other messages, including the messages from April 17th, were erased. An attempt to reconstruct them is ongoing.
	Strange Hairs	A clump of dark, short hairs found near the crime scene. They're coarse, and the ends are sharp-looking. They don't look like normal hair. - Their origin is unknown, but they don't look like they belong to the defendant. - Accidentally being pricked by one of these hairs left a small mark on Phoenix's finger that soon blistered. It also stung painfully, even hours later. - The above-mentioned incident also made Phoenix dizzy and weak, and he actually passed out for several minutes. - The prosecution also found a similar clump a few feet from the where the victim was incinerated. They were thankfully more careful.
	A Stack of Letters	A stack of envelopes addressed to Takashi Hino, from the defendant. Found in a locked drawer in Hiyama Hibiki's bedroom. All of them are unopened and unexamined, save one. - The one letter that has been opened is postmarked three days before the murder. In it, the defendant is rambling, begging her father to leave the victim, as it was clear to her he'd become completely obedient to her whims. - She further states that as much as she despises him, she doesn't want him to suffer, and that he would be "eaten alive" by the victim. - The opened letter was found crumpled and ripped, and was reconstructed by the authorities.
	Resolved Missing Person Report	A copy of a police report. Entered into evidence due to a comment by the defendant's grandfather about her defendant's recent past. Dated January 20th, 1996. The defendant disappeared without a trace on July 18th, 1995.

		- She was found on January 19th, 1996, near Azabu-Juuban Municipal High School, along with other girls her age who had also been reported missing. - The defendant refused to say where she had been for those six months while in custody.
 	Crane Machine Doll (Red and Orange)	Two crane machine dolls. The one in the red dress belongs to the defense. The one in orange belongs to the prosecution. - Apparently it's a doll of a superhero popular with the locals. Her name might be Sailor Mars. - As for the prosecutor's doll, it's their lucky Sailor V/Venus doll and it's an unofficial mascot of the office.
