NY Rangers to win

Analysis:

Igor Shesterkin, the former Vezina winner, has bounced back from an early-season slump, delivering back-to-back shutouts and a streak of 164:03 minutes without a goal allowed, nearly matching his career high. The New York Rangers, now fully healthy, are on a roll with a record of 6-0-3 in their last nine games. Meanwhile, the Philadelphia Flyers have won three straight games with Samuel Ersson in net, though he hasn't started four consecutive games this season, raising the possibility of a backup goalie being used in their upcoming match. Shesterkin has recorded five shutouts this season, while the Rangers have been averaging over 3.5 goals per game, positioning them strongly against the Flyers. The public money line bets are against is with only 26% of the bets in favor of NY to win the game. Again... The public isn't always right. Lets get it!

NHL: Utah Hockey Club @ Minnesota Wild - 8:00pm ET

Minnesota to win

Analysis:

The news of Kirill Kaprizov, the leading scorer for the Minnesota Wild and a former Hart Trophy candidate, along with team captain and top defenseman Jared Spurgeon, returning from multi-game injuries is likely to raise interest significantly. This marks a key turnaround for the Wild, who have been missing two of their pivotal players. Meanwhile, the Utah team is set to play its first road game since January 4, kicking off a back-to-back matchup. Furthermore, top defenseman Mikhail Sergachev, who has contributed 30 points this season, is uncertain to play after missing the last two games, which could impact Utah's defensive strategy. This combination of changes could heavily influence the upcoming game's dynamics, especially with the Wild bolstered by the return of their star players. The public is with us on this one with 87% of the bets on the Wild to win the game.

NBA: Miami Heat @ Milwaukee Bucks - 7:30pm ET

Milwaukee to win

Analysis:

Jimmy Butler has been suspended once again, further complicating matters for the Miami Heat, who are currently struggling with a 1-4 record over their last five games. This situation adds to the team's woes, as many believe Butler may need to be traded soon to prevent the season from completely unraveling. Meanwhile, the Milwaukee Bucks were set to face the New Orleans Pelicans on Wednesday, but that game was canceled due to weather conditions, prompting their return home. Fortunately for the Bucks, it appears that their full roster will be available for Thursday's matchup, which is crucial as it serves as their last home game until February 2. The Bucks' offense is thriving, having achieved a season-high streak of four consecutive games scoring at least 120 points, highlighting their offensive prowess leading into this important game. The public bets are coming in heavy in favor of the Bucks to win this one bringing 76 5 of the bets.
