        1. Looks like I'll get an offer! Jason seemed to say there wouldn't be any more interviews and it's more a matter of which role the business wants to prioritize.
        2. Said I'll see a lot of babies in video calls. Seems like that'd imply work-life balance.
        3. Using React and React Native.
    2. Forestry.io - Next round
        1. Care about Tina CMS right now, which is OSS. JS front end and back end.
        2. Do usability testing. Devs get into it. Usability testing on docs too. Wow!
        3. Greg seems like a great guy. Honest. Called me back to ask if I'm in it for the long haul instead of assuming I'm not because of my background. I really respect and appreciate that.
        4. Seems that sometimes people do work long hours. But also that Scott and Greg genuinely don't intend for that to be the case.
        5. They want people who are intrinsically motivated and maybe a little bit of going home and hacking on an idea, not just putting in 9-5.
        6. Part time dev out of high school. I'd be in between him and James in terms of experience.
        7. Meetings a decent amount. 9am every Monday, 45-120 mins. Friday 8am social meeting, not required. value retrospectives.
        8. Planning isn't fine-grained.
        9. Seems like things aren't consistent throughout the company.
        10. $2500 annually for remote stuff
        11. $450/month for health spending, health insurance coming later
        12. Bonuses? None.
        13. Equity? Negotiable.
        14. Senior devs make?
        15. Less exp working at companies is a big thing for them

    2. String - Technical interview
    1. Seems like stereotypical Silicon Valley guy. Pressure to work long hours, move fast, and meet deadlines. Some red flags in terms of the company.
    3. Keona Health - Call

    1. Nova Credit - Reevaluate Vegas in a few months

2. Underdog.io - Profile isn't live anymore
3. LeTote - Never called for phone screen
4. Gun.io - Test project
5. Service Fusion - I withdrew
    1. Annoying with algorithms interview. Didn't understand that I'm trying to come up with imperfect solutions and then iterate on them. In general seems to care about algorithms too much. Had aptitude test and personality test as first screening.
    2. Questions about doing things in vanilla JS that you'd never need given that you'd be using a framework in practice. A lot of similar stuff. Also asking how I'd write my own sanitize function when I could just use a library.
