Kit Personality

Mockingkit has an extremely family oriented life. Due to the hardships of living with parents with no love for each other, he finds himself filling the role of familial love, being extremely compassionate and loving to his siblings. Despite being the middle child, he sees himself as the one that has to play monkey in the middle and keep the peace, making sure that nobody’s tearing each other’s heads off. Though, this comes with its issues- usually he's imperturbable and grounded, able to keep his head on when dealing with all shenanigans, but even he has his breaking point— when his temper reaches its peak and he snaps, it's bad. Unpredictable as a raging flash flood and impulsive enough to slap you with whiplash. He can obsess over the littlest things that can bring him comfort and never wishes to let go, a small sense of possession, showing an eerie resemblance to Thorn. But at the same time, remaining grounded and strategic it shifts with this sudden unpredictability. You never know what's going to come out of tom's mouth or what he'll do. Rarely is it harmful though, as it’s more so a response to his family situation— it's sudden and quick. Luckily, again- he’s usually head-strong, and grounded so rarely does this unpredictability come into play in normal situations, but here's the odd thing— because this can change almost in an instant. While yes, this kit is cool, calm and collective— he can also display destructive behaviors** if met with fear, mainly by fear of his own father. He’s inconsistent with his own behaviour and it can cause self-destruction which in term, can cause him to be as selfish as Rosewolf, but at the end of the day he has a strong love for his siblings, especially Aeriekit.

Chapter one- Kithood

Have you ever been born in a loveless home? I have, be grateful for the life given to you- one parent is better than none.

A kit born into a split family it's horrifying, a father who won't look at you, the parent you look towards for food constantly in tears, it turns the kit into something emotionless- but emotional all at the same time.

He'll be okay though, as a middle child, they always seem to be forgotten about.
