Art lovers with a taste for original, fresh expressions have given American transplant to Canada, experimental artist Agent X's work high praise calling it "Pop Art with thought". Sure to cause more excitement, Agent X recently announced his stunning new Spring 2017 Collection is now available to be seen at www.agentxart.com. In addition, Agent X celebrated the news that his art is being shown at four new galleries, in North America,

Asia and Europe, along with exhibitions at the highly anticipated Frieze New York week in two different NYC exhibits.

The four new galleries his work is being featured in are The Untitled Space Gallery in New York; London's White Court Art Gallery; Art Loft Asia Gallery in Singapore; and Amsterdam's Kryon Gallery.

Frieze New York, a very popular week of art fairs and curated exhibits will see Agent X art shown at The Untitled Space Gallery featuring “SHE INSPIRES” starting on May 2nd until May 20th and a second exhibit at Art NYC Gallery, where “Peace De Resistance” will be shown from May 4th until May 7th.

Agent X comes from a background that includes study in New Haven, CT and Atlanta, GA before attending Art Institute of Vancouver for formal training. That said, the artist describes his compelling mash-up style as being self-created and inspired by influences that include current events, fashion, and music. His talent and creativity have awarded the Vancouver-based artist numerous honors worldwide, recently highlighted by being named one of the “12 Artists to Invest in Now” by New Blood Art Gallery, London.

With his profile on the rise, reviews of Agent X's artwork are ramping up.

Scott A., from Brooklyn, New York, recently said, “I've followed Agent X's work for a few years now and this is the second time I've purchased one of his collections. I really love the Spring 2017 Collection and his artwork gotten nothing but compliments and inspired some great conversations hanging on my walls.
