

Common Sense (Civvie Role Ability)

Whenever you gain a rank in Civvie, choose two of the following specialties to put one point into.

► Face in the Crowd

You are so unremarkable that finding you in a large crowd of people is difficult. You gain a number +1 bonuses to Stealth and Conversation checks equal to the points you have in this specialty.

► Assumed Innocent

When you are in combat, and a non-aggressed NCPD officer or Private Sec officer can see you, they must succeed an opposed Human Perception check against your Persuasion or Conversation plus your points in this specialty. On a failure, they will rush to your aid. You can prompt this same opposed check against those who are suspicious of your belonging at a certain location, convincing them on a success.

► Pathetic Eyes

You have a number of -1 penalties to Facedown checks equal to the number of points you have in this specialty. Whenever you fail a facedown by four points or more, the person aggressing you needs to roll 1d10. If the result of this roll is equal to or lower than their EMP statistic, the aggressor feels bad for you and you are unaffected by the Facedown.

► Responsible Adult

You gain the ability to open a Savings account, a separate storage of funds that amass interest at a standard rate. These accounts have an account opening cost of 100 euro. Keep track of your Savings account separately from your total Eurobucks. At the end of each month, your savings account earns an amount of interest at a percentage equal to your points in this specialty.

► Grill and Chill at Four-Thirty

You can use each of your lifestyle benefits (see Black Chrome) an additional number of times equal to your points in this specialty.

► Wage Slave

A number of times a week equal to your points in this specialty, you can elect to forgo sleep and take 1 point of Humanity Loss to work overtime. Once finished, you can roll on your Hustle table and divide the result by two.
