

This is a condensed version of an explanation of an infohazard. Do more research on stuff like this if you take things literally or are sensitive to many triggers.

An infohazard is a piece of information that can cause major shifts in your worldview, or is knowledge that can put the reader in “danger” while reading.

Before you leave out of fear that you are hearing some crazy conspiracy that puts your life at risk, know that:

The infohazards that I write about are fictional or just thought experiments.

Fictional infohazard? What?

Think of a fictional universe, such as SCPS. In this fictional universe, if you know this information, you are FICTIONALLY in danger. Meaning that in real life, you’re safe and sound.

Thought experiments are just that. Thought experiments. A thought experiment is a hypothetical situation in which a hypothesis, theory, or principle is laid out for the purpose of thinking through its consequences. This is not to be taken literally in the slightest, and it is not meant to be thought of as how life goes.

So unless you are triggered by certain sensitive topics, you’re good to go.

Enjoy.