

Helping with Conservation

Conservation means

protecting living things so they have what they need:

- habitats (a home)
- food sources
- not being over-hunted

For example, elephants are hunted for their tusks.

Their tusks are made of ivory.

In some places in the world, ivory is considered very valuable.

So people will hunt elephants just to get the ivory tusks.

Many people were upset about this. So laws were made to protect elephants.

With a partner or group, come up with one conservation idea and share with the class.
