SP 2021 Special Topics Course Descriptions

Critical Perspectives in Global Health (Olivas-Hernandez)

This course aims to provide an educational setting for Latinx/Hispanx students to discuss critical perspectives in Global Health. The purpose is to think critically and creatively about global health development from an interdisciplinary approach. Themes to explore include research methodologies from decolonial perspectives, the role of morals and values in policy development, and the challenges of tackling Global Health problems in neoliberal societies.

Satisfies (1) Medical Social Science Requirement for the GH BA/BS majors, or (1) GH Minor Elective

Students should apply to this course for pre-approval - please use the following link to apply:

Health and Well-Being among Refugees and Forced Migrants (Wilson)

This course provides an overview of the health worlds of forcibly displaced populations, focusing on the intersections of violence, migration, and globalization. Topics include infectious disease, mental health, health policy, and access to care. Specific case studies explored include Latin American migrant experiences in the US, Haitian migrant experiences in the Dominican Republic, African migrant experiences in France, and Afghan migrant experiences in Greece.

*Satisfies EITHER (1) Medical Humanities Requirement OR (1) Medical Social Science for the GH BA/BS majors, or (1) GH Minor Elective
