

In Orlando, Tripp exits his home after his vacation and makes his way to the crowd of reporters. It's his first appearance since his election loss and Dixians are tuning in to see their Senator speak.

“Good morning everyone. It’s great to be back in my hometown. You know, over the last week, I’ve done some reflecting. This loss was very hard for us and I know that y’all have been disappointed. However, I’ve thought long and hard about how I can continue to fight for progressive change in our state. And folks, let me make a promise right now. Governor Whitey will not get anything done in this session.”

“Our plan is simple. Our assembly will override any veto that Whitey offers. We’ll repeal any executive order he signs. And folks, we’re gonna block any cabinet nominees that he plans on nominating. Put simply, Whitey will have no power during his one term, and yes, it will only be one term.”

“So now, we turn our attention to the Federal elections. I told y’all last week that I’m running for re-election to the Senate. In the coming weeks, I plan to detail my plans to keep America on our progressive path. Rest assured, even if we have some Republican leaders in our state, they will have no power. As the chairman of the Dixie Democratic Party, I promise that our federal candidates and state leaders will not let Whitey do anything! It's time to go back to work."

"A lot of the policies that my campaign focused on will carry over into this campaign. We will defund the police on the Federal level and pass use of force reforms. We'll finally pass stricter gun regulations, like universal background checks and red flag laws. We'll pass a public option to provide healthcare for all. We'll improve education and we'll pass a bill to end standardized testing. Folks, let's make this official. I announce my candidacy for the United States Senate."

"Together, we'll fight for those minorities who have been ignored. We'll finally address racism on a Federal level. We're gonna renew our beliefs that all love is equal. And we're finally going to fix the economic injustice in our nation by taxing the large corporations. Thank you, God bless you, God bless the United States of America!"

Trippliyons18

Democrat for Senate

[M: The logo is part of the event and should be graded as such.