DNA Backs a Tribe's Tradition Of Early Descent From the Jews...

<https://www.nytimes.com/1999/05/09/us/dna-backs-a-tribe-s-tradition-of-early-descent-from-the-jews.html#:~:text=The%20Lemba%2C%20a%20Bantu%2Dspeaking,animals%2C%20such%20as%20the%20hippopotamus.>

But the remarkable thing about the Lemba tradition is that it may be exactly right.

A team of geneticists has found that many Lemba men carry in their male chromosome a set of DNA sequences that is distinctive of the cohanim, the Jewish priests believed to be the descendants of Aaron.

DNA ties African group to Jews

Tests support longtime Lemba claims

NEW YORK—Genetic tests on the Lemba people of southern Africa show strong evidence that the Bantu-speaking tribe may be of Jewish ancestry.

A team of geneticists has discovered that Lemba men carry a DNA sequence that is distinctive to the kohanim, a hereditary set of Jewish priests, the New York Times said Sunday. The priests, who are different from rabbis, perform certain ritual roles.

The Lemba, who practice circumcision, keep one day a week holy and avoid eating pork or piglike animals, long have asserted they are of Jewish heritage, the Times said.

The discovery of the common DNA sequences stemmed from research into the Jewish tradition that priests are the descendants of Aaron, the elder brother of Moses.

An analysis of the male Y chromosome found in 1997 that a particular pattern of DNA changes was much more common among kohanim priests than among lay Jews.

David B. Goldstein, a population geneticist at Oxford University in England, took that discovery one step further.

"In studying the priesthood, we happened into this tool for distinguishing Jewish from non-Jewish populations," Goldstein said.

Unlike in other chromosomes, the genetic material of the Y chromosome remains more or less unchanged from generation to generation, making it a useful tool in discovering heritage, the Times said.

Goldstein found a particular set of genetic mutations that was strongly associated with the priestly caste, not so common among lay Jews and very rare in non-Jewish populations. He then tested DNA samples collected from the Lemba.

Goldstein's research showed that the proportion of Lemba men carrying the genetic signature of the priests was similar to that found among the major Jewish populations, strongly supporting the Lemba tradition of Jewish ancestry, the Times said.

And the DNA sequences were particularly common among Lemba men who belong to the Buba clan, the senior of their 12 groups. The Lemba, from South Africa and Zimbabwe, believe they were led out of Judea by a man named Buba.

In a separate study, Tudor Parfitt, director of the Center for Jewish Studies at the School of Oriental and African Studies in London, said he has discovered the route the Lemba say they used to emigrate, saying he was told they traveled from a place called Senna to Africa.

Parfitt, who has studied the Lemba for 10 years and described his work in a recent book, Journey to the Vanished City, said he found a village called Senna in Hadramawt, a former site of Jewish communities in Yemen. He said he believes that is the Senna referred to in Lemba tradition.
