Subject Line; Is working for YOURSELF by YOURSELF appealing?

The alarm Rings and Another draining Day begins.

You're getting yourself out of bed feeling groggy As fuck and going into the bathroom to wash your face and take a shower.

You barely eat anything and run into your car (or worst the bus stop) to take your morning route to your hourly paying job.

Your Job starts, it ends and you go back home with no energy left in your system to completely pass out in bed.

Does that sound shamefully familiar?

I've been there we've all been there and there is no shame to that. It pays the bills and gives a roof over our heads.

However, did you ever want more? More than just surviving and repeating the same cycle over and over again?

I have news for ya'

The business world is STARVED for writers who know how to sell and know the power of words. People who can create ads and messages that compel others to take action.

And guess what.

Businesses pay handsomely to those who do so.
