Personality

- Sequoia is a sassy and bossy molly who always has something to fiercely retort with. She loves to run and play, however if a playmate is too rough she may tatttle on them, being extremely childish in that manner and wanting things to go her way. Sequoia is ruthless and blunt when she speaks, simply unable to lie or hold back about anything—and therefore always telling the plain, hard and painful truth. She is very loyal and surprisingly nice to her family (and friends) despite everything, and will defend them fiercely and bravely if need be. Recently Sequoia has become more and more judgmental of others, engaging in gossip with the cats around her. This, in turn, has created quite the socialite who enjoys and even thrives when talking with others. Sequoia loves to bother others to get attention, as she often gets bored and restless quickly.

History

Early life

- Sequoia was born to Evergreen, Caracal and Bixbite with three siblings; Porcupine, Sardonyx, and Morel. She's only full siblings with Porcupine. She loves to play, but often tattles if any sibling is too rough with her. She tends to lead the games they play but often tends to not be the funnest to play with. Even though Caracal was busy and Bixbite was grieving the death of Chanterelle, as she got older, she constantly bothered them in an attempt to get attention. She even made it her mission to make Bixbite play with her for ages, and she was determined to make her budge. Even though she wasn't busy, Evergreen was bothered the least of the parents by Sequoia. She also liked bothering a cat named Velvet who often seemed to sit outside of the den, sometimes pouncing on their tail as if it was a vicious snake... the poor cat was often awakened by Sequoia after they dozed off.
- There was this older litter of kittens from a cat named Lanturn. She hated Lantern, as he was constantly hating on her father's leadership abilities! That was unacceptable, and she absolutely refused to get along with him or any of his kittens. She would clash with a pair of them, Torch and Firefly... Firefly was always hostile to her and her littermates, and Sequoia reciprocated the hate. Torch... Torch just got on her nerves. His constant clumsiness and overconfidence annoyed her to no end.

- Sometimes, strange cats from other colonies would visit to talk with her father, often bringing along some playmates! She seemed to clash with a few of them, namely Leaf of Colibri Colony and Robin of Flight Colony. Leaf was big and mean, and they often ended up butting heads about the most random of things, and quite often. She didn't like Robin to begin with, especially after seeing his temper. She considers them her rivals, challenging their words and messing with them whenever they come around. Sequoia tries her best to get along with the rest of the kittens, however.

Change

- Time passed, winter came to an end, and the litter had gotten older. Sequoia started to become more and more social but also more judgemental, gossiping with the cats around her and playing just a bit less. She always seemed annoyed when Morel tried to drag her on his adventures, but secretly enjoyed it and was happy to hang out with her littermate. Sequoia started to notice how Morel looked at that one kitten of Lantern... Flash, of all cats! It was so darn obvious, he had a crush, didn't he..? Sequoia would stare at her brother with severe judgment, a look of disgust on her face.. she always rolled her eyes whenever she saw him around the white tom; she couldn't imagine what he saw in him. She didn't tell Bixbite though, knowing he'd probably get in trouble.
- Sardonyx would ask to use masculine terms, and start identifying as bigender; Sequoia was quick to support him!
- It was quite the surprise when Wolf Colony suddenly declared war on the Flytrap Colony! She didn't fear the evil kidnapping colony, not minding if she had to fight for her colony and happily trained for the war ahead. She was out one night after training hard, when she encouraged a strange animal. Was... that what her sister was named after? She approached the creature when she felt a piercing pain go through her ear and side, backing away and rushing back to camp while crying. Evergreen was quick to find her sobbing daughter and took her aside, doing their best to pluck the quills out. Sequoia refused to let her take out a pair of the quills from her ear, as it was "fine". And so they stayed, and she kinda liked the look? Sequoia has been sulking a lot lately after that.
