

Økonomisk Institut har både en særaftale med Danmarks Statistik samt en liste over data med åben adgang.

Danmarks statistik - særaftale

Dette muliggør, at du som polit-studerende på kan få udleveret et registerdatasæt til brug ved BA-projekter, kandidatspecialer, opgaver uden for kursusregi og følgende fag:

- Advanced Microeconometrics
- Bayesian Econometrics
- Demography
- Dynamic Programming - Theory, Computation and Empirical Applications
- Econometrics I
- Econometrics II
- Economics of Education
- Family Economics
- Health Economics
- International Trade and Investment
- Labour Economics
- Public Economics
- Sandsynlighedsteori og statistik
- Tax Policy
- Økonomiske øvelser i forbindelse med overenstående fag

Begrænsninger

- Datasættet kan ikke udvides med flere år eller ekstra variable på individniveau fra Danmarks Statistik.
- Danmarks Statistik yder ingen hjælp til dette datasæt eller til dokumentation af dette datasæt (bortset fra den information som ligger online på Danmarks statistiks hjemmeside).
- Datasættet udleveres kun til det brug i det semester, hvor undervisningen finder sted eller opgaven skrives. Herefter skal datasættet slettes.

Spørgsmål

Du skal ikke kontakte Danmarks Statistik med dine spørgsmål vedr. dette datasæt, men spørge din underviser eller vejleder.

Fortrolighed

Datasættet er fortroligt, og du må ikke overdrage det til andre studerende.

Du må ikke offentliggøre resultater, der er baseret på registerdatasættet. Du skal fremlægge resultaterne på en måde, så man ikke kan identificere individuelle personer eller virksomheder.

Adgang

Du får adgang til datasættet når du har tilmeldt dig specialet. Skriv derefter specialeadministrationen på Økonomi (specialeadministration@econ.ku.dk) og aftal et tidspunkt hvor du kan få lagt datasættet over på et USB-stik. Specialeadministrationen holder til i bygning 10, 1. sal på CSS.

Husk at medbringe et USB-stik med minimum 1 GB ledig plads samt din computer.

Open Access Data

The purpose of this page is to help students find data for their masters' thesis, and other projects. Links to different types of databases, which are all publicly available, across different topics are listed below. These data sources differ, however, greatly in their level of detail and volume. Therefore, not all links will be equally useful for different types of projects.

Demography and Health

- <https://www.ipums.org/> IPUMS provides census and survey data from around the world integrated across time and space. IPUMS integration and documentation makes it easy to study change, conduct comparative research, merge information across data types, and analyze individuals within family and community contexts. Data and services available free of charge.

Finance

- CRSP10

CRSP has just introduced CRSP10, which is a variation of our research-quality stock database. This database is a new value add to our current subscribers. CRSP10 holds 10 years of monthly history for active and inactive securities. The full dataset, delivered in a single Excel workbook, contains the time series and event history data for which CRSP is renowned. If you would like more information about our CRSP10 product please visit <http://crsp.org/announcements/announcing-crsp10> for more information.

Currently you can only get access to the CRSP-datafile by contacting the theses-administration (26.0.15) or write to specialeadministration@econ.ku.dk. Remember to bring your own USB-key.

Data from Journal Articles

Most journals post the data used for empirical analyses or have data archives. Therefore, if you find a good paper, the data behind the analysis is often either a public dataset or can be found at one of the authors' webpage. If not, you can also try contacting the responsible author. Look, for instance, at these journals (use the internet access to journals at the university/libraries):

- The Econometrics Journal: http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/journal/10.1111/\(ISSN\)1368-423X1368-423X)
- Journal of Applied Econometrics: http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/journal/10.1002/\(ISSN\)1099-12551099-1255)
- American Economic Journal: Applied Economics: <https://www.aeaweb.org/aej-applied/>
- Quarterly Journal of Economics: <http://qje.oxfordjournals.org/>
- Journal of Business and Economics Statistics: <http://amstat.tandfonline.com/loi/jbes#.VALp7U2KCUC>
- Useful econometrics links to data, journals, and software: Econometrics Links \(learneconometrics.com\)
- Econ-Datalinks

You have internet access to academic journals from the university and the Royal Library. Otherwise, you can also use the remote internet access through the Royal Library's search database (<http://rex.kb.dk/>).
