

Parallel Worlds

(or Parallel Johns)

by JEWL

2018

The same man named John in two separate parallel universes are simultaneously swapped to each other's' worlds by a micro-blackhole between the two universes.

One world has a utopian socioeconomic system called The LOVE Union (Life's Optimal Virtuous Economic Union) where every life has intrinsic value and money has nothing to do with one's worth or ability to survive and thrive. John from the other world experiences a new advanced world with a peaceful and flourishing social environment. A world without poverty, hunger, homelessness, war, and virtually no violence or crime. A virtuous world of aware, broad-minded, educated, informed and wise citizens well advanced in consciousness, emotional intelligence, and spiritual enlightenment, all driven and powered by the intention, the force, and the energy of Love. A world where truth and higher learning are not only taught within the education system but also channeled by and through the arts, entertainment, and news community. When John arrives in this new-to-him world he arrives with no identification, resources, or money. But he soon realizes that he has full access to all the benefits and means of survival and comfort within this advanced LOVE Union system. He's treated with kindness and respect everywhere he goes. He quickly learns from talking with others, and from research through the full access internet services, the logistics of how the LOVE system works. John had already been trying to promote a socioeconomic system just like this one when he was still in his homeworld but no one would listen. Being transported to this new world was like an instantaneous manifestation of what he had been trying to create, for John this new world is a dream come true. He embraces the new system and strives for a new life and pursues and continues to grow and accomplish various aspects of his true innate potential that were oppressed in his previous world, John is able to do the things he's always wanted to do but couldn't on his homeworld because "money" (or "lack of money") held him back, but not here, no one is held back from pursuing their dreams and reaching their full potential. John expanded his innate abilities and virtually became born-again with an even more increased consciousness, advanced emotional intelligence and experience, and spiritual enlightenment.

While on the other world, the other John from the utopian world, now in this new world experiences an antiquated and mostly unenlightened world with a greed-ego money-power based economic, political, and social system where human value and basic survival, health, and comfort is based on how much money each person has or can get. A world where everyone aggressively competes for money and resources instead of co-operates. A social structure and mentality of "each for themselves" in order to survive. A world with rampant crime, violence, war, starvation, homelessness; untreated yet treatable or curable sickness and disease, a cesspool of needless death and suffering. A polluted planet being aggressively stripped of its resources and life for profit-driven consumerism encouraged and induced by a bombardment of orchestrated and influential psychological and emotional self-image manipulation based commercialism throughout every facet of everyone's daily life. John tries to tell people in this apathetic, stress-filled, suffering world about The LOVE Union socio-economic system but the people won't listen, because the current psycho-socio-economic system has the world too busy and hypnotized to listen or understand. Most people just ignore or mistreat John anytime he tries to talk to them about a better system that will enable humans to flourish in all aspects of daily life. But they just continue ignoring, arguing with, laughing at, yelling at, calling names, spitting on, locking up, & even trying to kill John. Many of the people suffer from bouts of cognitive dissonance as John tries to teach them things outside their purview, things that don't fall in line or into the parameters of their dogmatic doctrinal belief systems of political, social, economic, or religious ideologies. They don't understand or realize how simple the logistics are to implement a technologically-based resource-management and currency system. They don't seem to recognize that a simple change to the current debt-based currency-creation central banking system from a "privately-owned and controlled" monopoly to a "publicly-owned and efficiently managed" socioeconomic system would heal the struggles and suffering for everyone, improving and enhancing every facet of their lives and planet. John's doppelganger family and friends think he's gone crazy and delusional and treats him with anger, ridicule, and/or concern. Eventually, a few intelligent people begin to listen, grasp, and understand what John has been trying to tell everyone. Then they begin publishing books, producing movies, tv shows, and documentaries, starting a grass-roots movement to enlighten the world about how to create a much better socio-economic system that will lift all people out of poverty and economic stress, and ultimately, over some time, advance civilization to a new paradigm of freedom, peace, Love, self-reflection, social awakening, and higher consciousness.

Then, once those advancements are achieved, the Johns suddenly switch back to their own worlds.

Note: There are still many details to be added, but that's a basic overview/summary of the storyline and plot.
