Title:

A Falcon of Summer by Lawkeeper

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

At Riverrun in the one night before marching off to war with Robert Baratheon, Jon Arryn sires a son with Lysa Tully. Jasper Arryn is an untested green boy, a lord of summer, but when the king who sits on the Iron Throne commands him to hand over his wards, history repeats itself. As High as Honor!

Title:

Sow the Tide, reap the storm by WearyBlues

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Quen felt peculiar up on the dais, flanked by stags and lions and wolves.
The Usurper had once been a formidable man, with blazing eyes and a massive war hammer. Now, he was just a red-faced fat man, a pathetic drunk who ate as gracefully as a half-starved hog.
His Queen seemed to be a perpetually unhappy woman. Cersei Lannister was as beautiful as the singers said, though the woman had all the warmth of a dead fish.
She might have done well in the north, Quen thought, almost pitying.
(Or: The gods in their blind malice give Theon the feeble body of a woman.)

Title:

Sunrise and Moonlight by AverageLucas

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

Aemma Arryn was to be a Queen, her daughter, a Princess.

Those words had surrounded Rhaenyra for the entirety of her short life. She had never paid them much mind, even as age and maturity led her to understand her station as a bastard. In the Vale, living within the relative solitude of the towers of the Eyrie, Rhaenyra was satisfied; she had her mother, Syrax, and her Uncle Daemon regularly visit.

It was not to last.

Aemma passed away, uttering the name of the man who had abandoned them with her final breath. While in King's Landing, Daemon crowned her trueborn older sister Queen of Love and Beauty for her nameday tourney.

As Rhaenyra lay alone in her bed, an ember began to form – borne out of resentment and grief.

Your mother was to be Queen, you a Princess.

Something had been taken from her, something that was rightfully hers.

Title:

The Blacks, The Greens and The Reds by Loke_Lyon

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary: Totally self-indulgent Rhaenyra Self-Insert, written solely because I need to start writing again instead of planning a story to death. Cross posted on Space Battles - back to regular posting!

Title:

Memories of tomorrow by Writing_as_tracey

Rating: Mature

Summary: At the base of a heart tree north of the Wall, Benjen Stark's nephews and nieces appear - older than the children he knows in Winterfell - bitter, cruel, and biting. A pack divided but with horror on their lips and blood on their hands. Their past is a nightmare, and despite how the Stark siblings lick at their individual wounds, the lone wolf dies but the pack survives - and they need to become a pack again if they want to avoid the mistakes of their pasts in the new future they have been offered.

Title:

Burning Snow and Purple Dawn by Wyanmai

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Childbirth is dangerous. When Catelyn dies after Robb Stark's birth, Ned is left free to marry Ashara Dayne, the woman he fell in love with at Harrenhal. A different lady for Winterfell leads to a different fate for the realm. Main timeline AU with extensive Robert's Rebellion prologue chapters and plenty of Dorne. See second fic in series for Character Glossary

Title:

The Ice Dragon by Spearshake

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

In the wake of the Rebellion, a young Prince is left alone in the capital with the ghosts of his ancestors and the burden of their mistakes. Will a Prince born into the Game of Thrones survive the deadly dance of King's Landing and save Westeros from the chaos that threatens it?

Rhaegar won on the Trident but died from his wounds in the aftermath of the battle. Jae was sent as a hostage to King's Landing. Aegon Targaryen grew up in Dorne.

Cunning/Jae

Complete!

Title:

Every time that you lose it \(Sing it for the world\) by IzzyMRDB

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary: Jaime ran through the halls of Casterly Rock, ducking and weaving deftly between servants and distant relatives, only stopping to help right the poor maid who nearly got knocked over by him before he was off again in the direction of his father's solar.

Seven years he has lived in this life, a world so familiar and so foreign, and he's made it his own. He knows the story, and he knows what will happen, but there are a few things that he can try to change.

Like this.

AKA

A self-insert into Jaime Lannister, except this is a normal guy who doesn't know how a printing press works and just wants to raise kittens and play with a sword

Title:

Alicent Reverses the Hourglass by reddishwork

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Inspired by the 'time travel revenge' manwha trope, this story begins several years after the Dance. The former queen, Alicent, sits in confinement and full of regret, waiting for death. That is until she's given a chance to go back in time to the year she married King Viserys and do it all over. With every intention of changing her fate, she might well be doomed to repeat the same mistakes as she is impeded at every turn by a familiar face who has received their own second chance.

Title:

Embrace The World in Grey by The Tenth Sunrise

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Two Wolves are sent North. Deep in the North, beyond the Wall, a lone Wolf survives the cold. A Young Wolf lies in the dark, and waits for rescue. Winter draws ever nearer.

or, the lone wolf dies but the pack survives

Title:

The Nightfyre by Just the Oreo

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

Jon Snow is condemned to the place where it all began. His true name, his parents — everything about him will be hidden. But too many already know the secret, and like Dany had warned him, it will grow beyond their control. And in the melting snows of the Haunted Forest, before the weirwood he first swore his oath, Jon finds someone he knew was dead....

Title:

To Forge an Heir by Capulet730

Rating: Mature

Summary:

A series of important conversations between Princess Rhaenyra Targaryen and Lord Lyman Beesbury.

Or

What if Rhaenyra had someone that was willing to help her grow into her role as heir of the Seven Kingdoms?

Title:

on troubled waters by trulyunruly

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"When Catelyn slips under the bed-covers, it is with a grateful sigh; and she sinks without resistance onto the mattress. It has been too long since she slept in a proper bed. Tomorrow, she would wake up comfortable and refreshed, Queen Catelyn Baratheon, loyal to her husband and king. Looking back is a dangerous slope and Catelyn dares not so much as peek over her shoulder. If she does, she might slip and fall and never find her way up. She must stand tall and look forward, or she may be lost."

AU where Hoster Tully takes a chance—and weds Catelyn to Robert Baratheon before he rebels. As her husband leads his court to Winterfell to make Ned Stark the Hand of the King, Catelyn tries her best to stay strong in the face of winter.

Title:

The Winter of Widows by laughingnell

Rating: Mature

Summary:

When she awoke to a new life in Westeros, Ursula Mires nearly did the smart thing. Only a year away from becoming sworn to the Faith as a septa and being free to live in relative comfort and safety in one of the more prestigious Reach cloisters, she was content with her lot in life. Her advice, slowly fed to her father over many years, had enabled her family to survive the Dance and rise in station. House Mires had its legacy secured, until tragedy struck early that winter. Now Ursula is heir to a floundering House she does not want, in a war-torn land that she must drag out of the mud. Many ladies are in her position in what maesters would later call 'the winter of widows'.

Only Ursula knows what is coming next, and she's not sure if her house will survive it.

Title:

A Banquet of Blood and Blades by havenlyd

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Aegon Targaryen, third of his name, had never thought he would dance.

But here he is, dancing with a demon.

After the death of Queen Jaehaera Targaryen, King Aegon III Targaryen chose Lady Barba Bolton of the Dreadfort among the many ladies who attended the ball. Little did he know that his choice would alter the course of his life and revived the fire and blood in him.

Title:

The Black Dragon's Daughter by SeriTheButterfly

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

The King Who Bore the Sword had seven sons. Only one remains now that House Blackfyre finally sits on the Iron Throne. But this is not his story. This is the story of those who would originally waste away in obscurity, the daughters of the Black Dragon.

Second Blackfyre Rebellion victory AU.

Title:

Robb Returns by 42AngryCymraeg

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

The War is not going well for the North. The Old Gods have no choice. Robb Stark must return to Winterfell - to a time when what he knows can make a difference.

Title:

Our Fathers clad in red by Gwenllian and Aifsaath

Rating: Mature

Summary:

The Dance of the Dragons is over and Rhaenyra Targaryen is dead, but Aegon II Targaryen's throne is far from secure. With enemies approaching and rumors swirling of a plot to replace him with Rhaenyra's son, a badly injured Aegon II Targaryen must somehow unite a deeply divided realm and convince his lords that he is still capable of being king. To do this, he makes a plan to marry Baela Targaryen, daughter of his most hated enemy.

Title:

Title:

Reinventing the Wheel \(An ASOIAF Uplift SI\) by Charles Garrett Abbott

Rating: SB fic, unconfirmed

Summary:

The Second Son of Lord Tywin Lannister and Lady Joanna Lannister, Callum, is possessed with otherworldly knowledge that threatens to revolutionize the administration, technology, and government of the Westerlands, but his impact on his family may prove just as significant.

Title:

The Old Gods Called. They'd Like Their Kingdom Back by Rhino \(RhinoMouse\)

Rating: Mature

Summary:

When two individuals explode out of the heart tree at Winterfell, the Bolton's think it's a blessing from the gods. It certainly is a change in their fortunes. Sansa expected to die the day the Bolton's did after their guest made the ground shake with her fury. Only she didn't, and now she is nominally the one in charge. With no army, no support outside of those men who saw an angry god and decided not to help their liege Lord, and said god is now her terrifying guest.

Daisy would like to stop being mistaken for a god, and also reiterate flaying innocent people alive is not an acceptable practice. It would help if Fitz would wake up already because she's clearly not going to be able to get them out of the medieval hellscape they're now trapped in. Although Fitz wouldn't be her first choice of companion to be stranded with. And magic ice zombies, because of course there's magic ice zombies.

Title:

I lack the patience to haunt / Instead, I hunt by Dwellingondreams

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"I dance in dangerous fables, walk a woods with trees white as bone. It's always winter and I'm always pressing my face against something warm with blood." - Yasmin Belkhyr, 'Blizzard'.

"Men die," Barbrey tells her, bone-white with anger, eyes flashing. "Men die, Donella. Should Stark's boy not sire a son on you, and if the Bastard has the Dreadfort-,"

"You speak as if Robb Stark were in fragile health," Nell rolls her eyes. "You're being paranoid."

"Willam was in excellent health until he rode off to his death at Ned Stark's side," Barbrey hisses. "Do you think he did not promise me we would have children and a long life together before he left? Do you think he did not promise to come back to me? You cannot know what the future might bring. My lord husband survived a war only to die in Dorne. Men and their promises are not your safety nor your refuge. Land is. Power is. Never forget that."

(In which Nell Bolton contends with both her mother's bloodstained legacy and her father's bloodthirsty bastard, and along the way claims a beast for a bridegroom.)

Title:

High Tide by Tertius711

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Corlys Velaryon is a man of legend. He has begun a new Age of Enlightenment and Exploration, of revolutionary new ideas, and incredible innovations that have made travel at sea faster and more profitable than ever before. But progress is not without consequences. In this changing world, can Corlys continue to guide House Velaryon to its promised high tide?

Title:

Hear Me Roar by Willywalkerstrikesagain

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

A magical event transports the kingdom of the Westerlands to Middle Earth just before the War of the Ring, will the Lannisters find what good is in their hearts or will they be corrupted into the service of Sauron and doom the world of men?

Title:

Under the Snow by FYB1991

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"For the Watch."

The world is wrong. Jon fell to his knees with a dagger in his back, an oath breaker, a bastard of House Stark, and a fallen and failed Lord Commander of the Night's Watch. He awoke as a Prince of the Seven Kingdoms, the son of a dead man, a scion of House Targaryen. The world is wrong, and Jon needs to right it - but as cold winds blow and men dance with their ghosts, the Game of Thrones never ends.

Title:

Title:

The Hounds of Harrenhal by g0lightly

Rating: Mature

Summary:

[Longfic! Canon compliant except for the fact that Sansa is now Robb's fraternal twin. The story begins in 302 AC, making Sansa 19 and Brienne 21.]

After Jaime's death, Brienne takes over the Hound's helm and persona in her grief. To restore his honor and legacy, she resumes her mission to find Sansa; along the way, she enters a tourney at the Eyrie as the Hound to win some much needed coin to continue on through winter. At the Eyrie, Lady Alayne Arryn begs the stranger in the Hound's helm for help escaping a doomed marriage.

Brienne temporarily sets aside her mission to help the lady escape north to reunite with her family. Petyr Baelish then announces that the Hound has abducted Sansa Stark, who has been in disguise as his bastard daughter Alayne, and advertises a large reward for her safe return. All this as Tyrion uses his previous marriage to Sansa as an attempt to take the Vale for the mountain clans and Daenerys, ultimately leading to a second dance of the dragons as the Long Night looms over a years-long winter.

Soon all the singers of Westeros would sing of Harrenhal's Hounds, their witch queen, and the "abduction" that started it all - but life is not a song. In this story, it is far sweeter.

Title:

Alysanne, Lady of Winterfell by Autumn Llleaves

Rating: Mature

A Dream of Dragons by stormsandspires

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

Jon Snow, in the throes of anger, grief and bitterness, leaves the freefolk to journey deeper into the North, deeper into territory no man has ever ventured before.

He never expected to ever come back. In fact, he expected to die there. But instead, his exhibition brings him face to face with magic more ancient than the First Men.

He kneels before a heart tree and begs for the life of the woman he loved the most. The woman whose heart he pierced with a dagger. But instead, he opens his eyes and lying in front of him is a wailing child, with silver blond hair and lilac eyes. A child that would have been born had he not plunged a knife through her heart.

But that is only the beginning.

As Jon navigates fatherhood alone, he discovers new things about himself and uncovers ancient secrets about a foe he thought once vanquished, all while the realm is on the brink of collapse once more, and in the East, a dragon has awoken, and thirsts for Fire and Blood.

Maester Aemon still has his sight when Jon Snow arrives at Castle Black to swear his vows. Targaryen's might have typically had pale hair and purple eyes, but Maester Aemon would recognise his family anywhere.

His vows have been tested three times before. This is his fourth and final test and, after nearly eighty years of being a bystander at the Wall whilst his family destroyed themselves, Aemon decides that enough is enough. He's been a man of the Nights Watch for most of his life; but he's been a Targaryen all his life.

He might be old and trapped at the Wall, but he grew up in Kings Landing and no one knows the Game of Thrones like he does.

And so, everything changes.

Scream against the storm by Perfidious Albion

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"When I was a boy, I dreamt that I could fly. When I awoke, I couldn't... or so the maester said. But what if he lied?"

-- Euron Greyjoy, A Feast for Crows

A three-eyed crow appears in your dreams. It tells you wild tales of a great icy threat from the far north, and promises you some strange power--to be a 'greenseer'--to thwart them. You must. "Fly or die". Because winter is coming.

In our world, that crow flew to Bran Stark and, perhaps, to Euron Greyjoy. What if it flew to someone else?

"Sacrifice... is never easy. Or it is no true sacrifice."

The Hounds of Harrenhal by g0lightly

Rating: Mature

Summary:

[Longfic! Canon compliant except for the fact that Sansa is now Robb's fraternal twin. The story begins in 302 AC, making Sansa 19 and Brienne 21.]

After Jaime's death, Brienne takes over the Hound's helm and persona in her grief. To restore his honor and legacy, she resumes her mission to find Sansa; along the way, she enters a tourney at the Eyrie as the Hound to win some much needed coin to continue on through winter. At the Eyrie, Lady Alayne Arryn begs the stranger in the Hound's helm for help escaping a doomed marriage.

Brienne temporarily sets aside her mission to help the lady escape north to reunite with her family. Petyr Baelish then announces that the Hound has abducted Sansa Stark, who has been in disguise as his bastard daughter Alayne, and advertises a large reward for her safe return. All this as Tyrion uses his previous marriage to Sansa as an attempt to take the Vale for the mountain clans and Daenerys, ultimately leading to a second dance of the dragons as the Long Night looms over a years-long winter.

Soon all the singers of Westeros would sing of Harrenhal's Hounds, their witch queen, and the "abduction" that started it all - but life is not a song. In this story, it is far sweeter.

Maids of Summer by DunktheLunk

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

It is the Summer of 172 AC in the Seven Kingdoms of Westeros. King Aegon IV sits the Iron Throne as tensions begin to rise between him and his heir, Daeron Targaryen, and the wounds of the Dornish war are still fresh. In the midst of these tensions, Lady Myranda Mallery, newly a woman grown, prepares to be forced to attend a tourney at King's Landing with her younger sister Gwenys and younger brother Olyvar, lord of her house. While Myranda's stepmother hopes this will be a chance for Myranda and Gwenys to meet their potential husbands, only Gwenys is pleased about the idea. Myranda and her siblings soon find themselves embroiled in the maelstrom that is romance, politics, and desire at the royal court. Promise me Robb: \(a different war of 3 kings and beyond\) by UnlimitedSimians

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"Know, now more than any other time, I have always loved and cared for you. I have the greatest faith in you that you shall do the right thing, I leave you with you these lessons and guidance that I so wish my own dear father could have left me before his passing.

Promise me, in my memory if need be"

Ned manages to get a message sent to Robb, after discovering the truth of the Lannister incest but before Robert's death/Neds capture.

Generally more positive for Stannis & Robb than canon (granted that's not hard...), but firmly not in wank territory aiming for something closer to GRRM's bitter sweet preferences.

The plan is to split the story into three parts (they are a bit too short, at least in this fandom, to call them books)

1 Call to War (complete) chapters 1-30, the alternative War of Five Kings

2 Tears for Autumn (ongoing) chapter 31-??, Focuses more on the challenges of peace building/making and how the Watch prepares for the Others when it is actually getting decent backing from the Crown.

3 Prayers for the dawn chapters ???-??? not started yet.

Current character tags are major characters or POVs, who have appeared so far (we will get to Danny eventually).

The Empire of the Black Dragons by AdmiralBreetai and TheShadowKnows

Rating: General Audiences

Summary:

Maesters have dubbed it the Second Targaryen Golden Age.

It has been a century since the reign of Daeron, the Second of His Name. A hundred years of peace and prosperity, conquest and ascent, yet--

It ended in fire and blood. It ended in madness.

Following the death of Aerys the Mad, a Blackfyre now sits upon the Iron Throne. Daemon the Great has ruled an empire larger than any since the mythical Age of Dawn.

Nine years an alliance of Stark, Arryn, Tully, Baratheon, and Blackfyre has kept the peace.

Nine years the long summer of Daeron the Good, and Daemon Blackfyre after him, has survived past its false autumn.

But seasons change, and all ages come to an end.

What if the three White Knights, guarding the Tower of Joy knew of Ned Stark's search for his sister. What if they were able to meet him in secret and concoct a plan to keep the new-born King safe until he could reclaim his rightful throne.

Jon (Aegon Targaryen) grows up, helped by a small group that secretly prepares Westeros for the restoration of the Targaryen dynasty. As he comes of age, Jon gradually takes charge of his own destiny.

This is a Jon-centric story where he claims his birthright and has dragons. Daenerys' life is vastly different compared to canon. She will meet Jon without having conquered Essos and has a long way to go before becoming a dragonrider in her own right. Endgame, however, will be a happy Jonerys riding dragons together and ruling as equals.

The Water Between Us by sensira

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

As they flew, Rhaenys watched her granddaughter. Her curls had been blown free from their pins, streaming in the wind, and she had raised a hand to idly trace the underside of a cloud. A sudden desperation seized her. If Corlys died, Baela would be one of the last two things binding her to this life.

Rhaenys shook her head, discarding the feeling, and settled in her saddle. There were three things that she had absolute faith in: Meleys, her husband, and that it would be Baela who would inherit the Driftwood Throne, even if it killed Rhaenys to put her there.

Rhaenys pushes for Baela's claim during the Driftmark succession crisis and finds herself sharing common ground with Alicent Hightower and her strange, half-Targaryen children. As war seizes the realm, Rhaenys, Baela, and Rhaena must navigate House Velaryon to safety, fighting alongside the people always believed to be their enemy.

And Nothing of Value Was Lost by Fenestrus

Rating: SB fic, unsure on rating

Summary:

Vaegon Targaryen is a man my colleagues have long decided to categorize as complicated. For those readers with whom I share the honor of hailing from the many cities of Andalos, this might come as a surprise. How, one might ask, could our most honored founder not be loved? He who founded the most blessed of the city-states, how could he be anything but praised? Vaegon the Dragon Lord, Vaegon the Visionary, Vaegon the Scholar, beloved by all daughters of Old Valyria, what quarrel could one have with him?

For those readers that hail from Westeros, meanwhile, this descriptor is as likely to be met with fiery invective in the honored founder's favor as not. How dare you scorn the legacy of the Avenger, the Sword of the Faith, The Liberator, The Bright Prince! How dare you venerate the Kinslayer, The Apostate, The Breaker, The Black Dragon!

Why, I ask, do these two realms, separated only by the narrowest of seas, hold such disparate, such violently contradictory views of the same man? What has he done to elicit such controversy?

For this, we must look to the past, to the earliest days of the third son of Jaehaerys I Targaryen, King of Westeros. And what a tale it is..."

The Journal of King Joffrey Baratheon, First of his Name by Hermionechan90

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

In the year 1857 AC the journal of the king that solidified the rule of the Baratheon dynasty was found. The surprisingly frank and direct journal entries give Dr. Hedda Barath a rather unique insight in what life was in Westeros 1500 years ago.

With growing unease, I note that the so venerated Maesters at Oldtown have started to adjust the events of my reign in a nearly utopian narration. Gone are the mistakes I made in my reign, gone are the hunger and thirst, the blood and the sickness, only the glory and honorable deaths are left. Nothing of the cravenness in my own ranks, instead the only ones that were craven were my enemies. Men and women that stood opposite me are demonized into fantasy. I cannot abide this farce, I simply cannot. So in these last days before the Stranger takes me too I will attempt to give an account of my life, the events that shaped me and my rule.

Summary:

"Master yourself, Aegon," his mother said. Despite the harsh words, her voice had softened slightly, and he wondered where she'd found that scrap of sympathy when her kindness was usually reserved for Helaena or Aemond. But then, he'd just been given life-altering— no, life-shattering— news, and he supposed his mother's own life had been shattered once or twice before. “Get dressed. Clean clothes, please. Try to look presentable, and not give your father reason to question his recent decisions.” She touched his arm and he looked up at her, his vision blurry with stupid, sudden tears. “It’s an honor. He chose you over her. Remember that. We’ll be waiting for you in the king’s chambers.”

To prevent war, Aegon is named heir and betrothed to Baela Targaryen.

Summary: Aemma Arryn was to be a Queen, her daughter, a Princess.

Those words had surrounded Rhaenyra for the entirety of her short life. She had never paid them much mind, even as age and maturity led her to understand her station as a bastard. In the Vale, living within the relative solitude of the towers of the Eyrie, Rhaenyra was satisfied; she had her mother, Syrax, and her Uncle Daemon regularly visit.

It was not to last.

Aemma passed away, uttering the name of the man who had abandoned them with her final breath. While in King's Landing, Daemon crowned her trueborn older sister Queen of Love and Beauty for her nameday tourney.

As Rhaenyra lay alone in her bed, an ember began to form – borne out of resentment and grief.

Your mother was to be Queen, you a Princess.

Something had been taken from her, something that was rightfully hers.

Winterfell is alive with light, windows glowing and chimneys smoking, and Jon can't remember the last time he saw it so full of life, walls still standing tall.

This Winterfell has never seen a Bolton occupation, has never witnessed the march of the dead, the wrath of dragon fire. It is eight years before the fall of the Wall, and it feels like a dream. Jon still can't bring himself to completely believe it. Mance Rayder is not yet King Beyond The Wall, the Free Folk have not yet begun to gather, and what stories there are of White Walkers and the dead that walk are still only that, just stories.

It has not yet begun, Jon thinks, dread sinking in his stomach.

A sequel to A wolf amongst lions.

Many years have passed since the Long Night ended. Since Daenerys Targaryen took the throne, ushering in a new era of peace. Since Arya Stark-now Arya Lannister-returned to Casterly Rock and began to do everything in her power to maintain that peace, just as Tywin instructed.

Twenty years later, radicals of the Lord of Light are rising across Westeros. Wild dragons scatter across the land for the first time in centuries. The secret of Jon Stark's true family threatens to come to light every passing day. And many debate who holds the true power in Westeros: The queen? Or the Wolf of Casterly Rock. Amidst it all, Arya's children struggle to live in the shadow of their mother and their family name.

Twenty years is a long time for peace. The question is not if it will end. The question is who will shatter it. And who will survive once they do.

The Red Wolf by Wardown

Crossover fandom: Death of Stalin

Rating: Mature

Summary:

An alternative ending to A Dish Best Served Cold, which leads to the start of a new story.

A Dish Best Served Cold portrayed Sansa as a villain, albeit with some good qualities. Here, she is more morally ambiguous. She had an outstanding record in The Great Patrotic War, beginning at Stalingrad. But, she is in service to evil men, has worked to snuff out freedom in parts of Eastern Europe, is a torturer, and commanded a prison camp (unwillingly).

One should be careful about judging the moral compromises made by people who live under dictatorships. Most of us would do the same.

This is tagged "BAMF Sansa" among other things. That does not imply that Sansa is a saint. But, anyone who fought with distinction at Stalingrad and during Operation Bagration, and was awarded the Order of the Red Banner by Zhukov is unquestionably, a BAMF.

Many thanks to Sploot for the original idea, and The Samovar is Hot for her input on Russian society and life.

I should add, this tale was written prior to the Putin's invasion of Ukraine. I apologise in advance for any offence that may be caused by the depiction of oppression of Ukrainians by the USSR.

The Old Gods Called, They'd Like Their Kingdom Back by Rhino \(RhinoMouse\)

Crossover Fandom: MCU

Rating: Mature

Summary:

When two individuals explode out of the heart tree at Winterfell, the Bolton's think it's a blessing from the gods. It certainly is a change in their fortunes. Sansa expected to die the day the Bolton's did after their guest made the ground shake with her fury. Only she didn't, and now she is nominally the one in charge. With no army, no support outside of those men who saw an angry god and decided not to help their liege Lord, and said god is now her terrifying guest.

Daisy would like to stop being mistaken for a god, and also reiterate flaying innocent people alive is not an acceptable practice. It would help if Fitz would wake up already because she's clearly not going to be able to get them out of the medieval hellscape they're now trapped in. Although Fitz wouldn't be her first choice of companion to be stranded with. And magic ice zombies, because of course there's magic ice zombies.

The Hounds of Harrenhal by g0lightly

Rating: Mature

Summary:

[Longfic! Canon compliant except for the fact that Sansa is now Robb's fraternal twin. The story begins in 302 AC, making Sansa 19 and Brienne 21.]

After Jaime's death, Brienne takes over the Hound's helm and persona in her grief. To restore his honor and legacy, she resumes her mission to find Sansa; along the way, she enters a tourney at the Eyrie as the Hound to win some much needed coin to continue on through winter. At the Eyrie, Lady Alayne Arryn begs the stranger in the Hound's helm for help escaping a doomed marriage.

Brienne temporarily sets aside her mission to help the lady escape north to reunite with her family. Petyr Baelish then announces that the Hound has abducted Sansa Stark, who has been in disguise as his bastard daughter Alayne, and advertises a large reward for her safe return. All this as Tyrion uses his previous marriage to Sansa as an attempt to take the Vale for the mountain clans and Daenerys, ultimately leading to a second dance of the dragons as the Long Night looms over a years-long winter.

Soon all the singers of Westeros would sing of Harrenhal's Hounds, their witch queen, and the "abduction" that started it all - but life is not a song. In this story, it is far sweeter.

From fire we shall rise by Walkingpottergirl14

Ship: Jon/Dany

Rating: Mature

Summary:

The Sons of the Harpy have taken over the Great Pyramid. Daenerys is nearly killed by a former slave master when Ser Barristan comes to her aid, saving her life. Instead of continuing down a long-path of regrets to try and gain peace, while one of her dragons is missing and the others are locked up, her most-trusted protector comes up with an idea - travel to where the last Targaryen is, Maester Aemon, and get his advice on what to do. When they arrive, Daenerys meets acting Lord Commander, Jon Snow. And from there, the world will never be the same.

Title:

The Hounds of Harrenhal by g0lightly

Ship: Sansa/Brienne

Rating: Mature

Summary:

[Longfic! Canon compliant except for the fact that Sansa is now Robb's fraternal twin. The story begins in 302 AC, making Sansa 19 and Brienne 21.]

After Jaime's death, Brienne takes over the Hound's helm and persona in her grief. To restore his honor and legacy, she resumes her mission to find Sansa; along the way, she enters a tourney at the Eyrie as the Hound to win some much needed coin to continue on through winter. At the Eyrie, Lady Alayne Arryn begs the stranger in the Hound's helm for help escaping a doomed marriage.

Brienne temporarily sets aside her mission to help the lady escape north to reunite with her family. Petyr Baelish then announces that the Hound has abducted Sansa Stark, who has been in disguise as his bastard daughter Alayne, and advertises a large reward for her safe return. All this as Tyrion uses his previous marriage to Sansa as an attempt to take the Vale for the mountain clans and Daenerys, ultimately leading to a second dance of the dragons as the Long Night looms over a years-long winter.

Soon all the singers of Westeros would sing of Harrenhal's Hounds, their witch queen, and the "abduction" that started it all - but life is not a song. In this story, it is far sweeter.

Our Fathers clad in red by Gwenllian and Aifsaath

Ship: Baela/Aegon II

Rating: Mature

Summary:

The Dance of the Dragons is over and Rhaenyra Targaryen is dead, but Aegon II Targaryen's throne is far from secure. With enemies approaching and rumors swirling of a plot to replace him with Rhaenyra's son, a badly injured Aegon II Targaryen must somehow unite a deeply divided realm and convince his lords that he is still capable of being king. To do this, he makes a plan to marry Baela Targaryen, daughter of his most hated enemy.

Title:

All Kings are Beautiful by Gwenllian

Ship: Baela/Aegon

Rating: Mature

Summary:

"Master yourself, Aegon," his mother said. Despite the harsh words, her voice had softened slightly, and he wondered where she'd found that scrap of sympathy when her kindness was usually reserved for Helaena or Aemond. But then, he'd just been given life-altering—no, life-shattering—news, and he supposed his mother's own life had been shattered once or twice before. "Get dressed. Clean clothes, please. Try to look presentable, and not give your father reason to question his recent decisions." She touched his arm and he looked up at her, his vision blurry with stupid, sudden tears. "It's an honor. He chose you over her. Remember that. We'll be waiting for you in the king's chambers."

To prevent war, Aegon is named heir and betrothed to Baela Targaryen.

Summary: Aemma Arryn was to be a Queen, her daughter, a Princess.

Those words had surrounded Rhaenyra for the entirety of her short life. She had never paid them much mind, even as age and maturity led her to understand her station as a bastard. In the Vale, living within the relative solitude of the towers of the Eyrie, Rhaenyra was satisfied; she had her mother, Syrax, and her Uncle Daemon regularly visit.

It was not to last.

Aemma passed away, uttering the name of the man who had abandoned them with her final breath. While in King's Landing, Daemon crowned her trueborn older sister Queen of Love and Beauty for her nameday tourney.

As Rhaenyra lay alone in her bed, an ember began to form – borne out of resentment and grief.

Your mother was to be Queen, you a Princess.

Something had been taken from her, something that was rightfully hers.

Maesters have dubbed it the Second Targaryen Golden Age.

It has been a century since the reign of Daeron, the Second of His Name. A hundred years of peace and prosperity, conquest and ascent, yet--

It ended in fire and blood. It ended in madness.

Following the death of Aerys the Mad, a Blackfyre now sits upon the Iron Throne. Daemon the Great has ruled an empire larger than any since the mythical Age of Dawn.

Nine years an alliance of Stark, Arryn, Tully, Baratheon, and Blackfyre has kept the peace.

Nine years the long summer of Daeron the Good, and Daemon Blackfyre after him, has survived past its false autumn.

But seasons change, and all ages come to an end.

Summary:

"I dance in dangerous fables, walk a woods with trees white as bone. It's always winter and I'm always pressing my face against something warm with blood." - Yasmin Belkhyr, 'Blizzard'.

“Men die,” Barbrey tells her, bone-white with anger, eyes flashing. “Men die, Donella. Should Stark’s boy not sire a son on you, and if the Bastard has the Dreadfort-,”

“You speak as if Robb Stark were in fragile health,” Nell rolls her eyes. “You’re being paranoid.”

“Willam was in excellent health until he rode off to his death at Ned Stark’s side,” Barbrey hisses. “Do you think he did not promise me we would have children and a long life together before he left? Do you think he did not promise to come back to me? You cannot know what the future might bring. My lord husband survived a war only to die in Dorne. Men and their promises are not your safety nor your refuge. Land is. Power is. Never forget that.”

(In which Nell Bolton contends with both her mother's bloodstained legacy and her father's bloodthirsty bastard, and along the way claims a beast for a bridegroom.)

Character(s) of focus: Fem!Theon

Rating: Mature

Summary:

Quen felt peculiar up on the dais, flanked by stags and lions and wolves. The Usurper had once been a formidable man, with blazing eyes and a massive war hammer. Now, he was just a red-faced fat man, a pathetic drunk who ate as gracefully as a half-starved hog. His Queen seemed to be a perpetually unhappy woman. Cersei Lannister was as beautiful as the singers said, though the woman had all the warmth of a dead fish. She might have done well in the north, Quen thought, almost pitying. (Or: The gods in their blind malice give Theon the feeble body of a woman.)

Character(s) of focus: Fem!Jaime, Male!Cersei

Rating: Teen and Up

Summary:

If Jaime Lannister was born a girl and Cersei was the eldest son. Also, just for fun, Ser Brien of Tarth

Jaime had been allowed near no blade after the Whispering Wood. Her wild mane of unwashed curls still glinted gold, her once-fine gown was tattered rags, her face was pale and wasted, yet the woman still had the nerve to be beautiful, magnificent even in chains.

"Kingslayer... And such a king he was!" She lifted her cup mockingly. "To Aerys Targaryen. And to the sword that opened his throat. People believe that I stabbed him in the back with a dagger having weaselled my way in his bed. He'd have preferred that way, and called me Joanna all the while,"

"Had it been my choice, I would have been the definition of faithful and never have left my brother's side. But we don't always get a choice. You wouldn't understand, you're an honest woman. Most honest women are just lucky. What would you have done if Robert took advantage of you being drunk and alone? He's the king, a big man, your blows bounce off his chest and, should you tell anyone, your husband would behead you himself,"

"Ned would never - "

"Ned would never," Jaime said carefully. "But Stannis would,"

"That had better be a jape," The cold words were jarring from the pretty ten year old, and caught the attention of the hall immediately. Silence fell. Tytos opened his mouth, but Tya cut him off.

"You've betrothed me - your firstborn child - to the second son of the Lord of the Crossing?"

There was a mocking, incredulous note to her voice.

"Well Tya, Lord Frey asked very courteously - it would have been most insulting to have refused him,"

"He asked courteously?" Tya raised an eyebrow. "Is that all it takes now? Should Genna fear being betrothed to the son of that kennel-master knight, if he asks nicely enough?"

"Why did you have to do this, Tya?" Her father moaned. "Return Lord Walderan to his family at once, with our sincerest apologies! Forgiving his all his debts should be the least we do to make amends,"

The look Tya gave Lord Tytos was fit to reduce him to a pile of ash.

"I was planning on returning Tarbeck to his family in three pieces,"

Forgiven by Sploot

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

"This is Ygritte the Red Spear," Jon said, loudly. "A wildling from beyond the Wall. Killer of women and children."

"That's right," Ygritte said, leveling Edd's shotgun at Jon Snow. "I've killed women and children. I've killed just about everything that walks or crawled at one time or another. And I'm here to kill you, Jon Snow, for what you done to Gilly's baby. You boys and girls better move away."

Several people standing behind Jon Snow scattered. Fat Walda remained rooted in place.

“All right, ladies and gentlemen,” Jon Snow said, moving toward Ygritte. “She’s got one barrel left. When she fires that, take out your pistols and shoot her down like the syphilitic whore she is!”

She pulled the trigger, and nothing happened other than a loud click.

“Misfire!” Jon shouted. “Kill the bitch!”

A Better Fate by tm_writes

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

During the war in the Stepstones, Daemon overhears Corlys and Vaemond discussing how to get close to the Iron Throne, including a marriage between Rhaenyra and Leanor.

Upset at their plans for Rhaenyra, knowing Laenor is not a fit husband for his niece, Daemon is determined to change her fate.

Before returning to King's Landing, Daemon detours to the Vale and ‘deals’ with the issue of his wife. Now free of a wife he never wanted, Daemon is eager to return to the comforts of home. When he does, he can’t help but notice how much Rhaenyra has matured in the four years he’s been gone.

When he sees how lonely she is, he asks her to go dragon riding, determined to prove to her that he is there for her. Soon, they find themselves on Dragonstone, exploring their ancestral home as Daemon shows her the drawings he’s found in the caves below, while she shares what her father told her about the song of Ice and Fire and Aegon’s Dream.

Neither one realizes the Old Gods of Valyria are at work and determined to make the House of the Dragon strong once more, they marry on Dragonstone before returning home to deal with the weakened King Viserys and the mess he has made of their great house.

The Dragon's Roar by Priestess of Groove

Rating: Explicit

Summary:

Humanity failed to stop the Night King and his legion of undead until it was too late. The displeased Gods decide it should take a greater role in the fate of humanity and wind back to a time before the world fell apart. Jon Snow, the Prince Who Was Promised, and Jaime Lannister are sent back to prevent The War of the Five Kings and unite Westeros under a single banner to avoid a terrible fate. Even with the advantage of hindsight, things never go as planned.

Summary:

A sequel to Fire on the Steppe, beginning a couple of years after that story ended. Ygritte survived the fight at Castle Black.

"My mother desired you, you know". Sansa lay on her bed with Jon. Margaerey was asleep in her cot.

"Seven hells, she hated me!"

"Resented you, rather. She wanted you, but she couldn't have you. She was surrounded by attractive young men, but she couldn't dare run the risk of a pregnancy, outside of the marriage bed. Tell it true, Jon, you wanted her too, didn't you? You'd have taken us both together, if you could."

He hesitated, looking shamefaced. Then he nodded, "I would."

Some issues

I would prefer to try be honest with people and so I will, I accidentally forgot three entries, I forgot them because to be honest there has been quite a lot for me to cover and things fell through the cracks.

I was horrified to find out, let me explain the details of each.

I discovered that I forgot AbaddonKhaleesi on the 4th of December and messaged the author since I ties to them through discord, I then added them into the awards, meaning they missed three days which while not as bad as the other two, it still isnt quite fair.

I discovered that I forgot the fic The Prancing Stag on December 20th and messaged the author on december 21st on Reddit to clear things up

Lastly, I just discovered as of 20:00 on December 22nd that I forgot KojiSan-Game of Thrones: The First Elven King. I have never spoken to this author as their fic was on webnovel and I did not make an account on time. So they were never made aware that the awards are occurring to the best of my knowledge, but that does not take away from the core issue.

For the latter two names, it is obviously way too late to add them into the voting form, given the 20 or so day disadvantage, but I am making the note here, because I feel they deserve to be highlighted, this isnt something I want to sweep under the rug. The awards were extremely stressful, while also being fun and I am extremely proud at the effort put in, it was a hell of an undertaking and it just sucks things fell through the cracks due to the stress and the scale (which I am grateful for in the case of the scale of the competition)

That all said, as compensation, I am going to offer automatic entry for any of those I forgot, into next years competition for two categories. If I forgot anyone else, please make contact, I have been saying this since the day the awards started, but I wont automatically know unless it is pointed out to me.

Also if you would like to help me next year, myself and the mod team would really appreciate it, the more eyes on this to discover mistakes the better, because my eyesight isnt going to magically repair itself by the end of 2025.

So, in conclusion, my deepest apologies to those I forgot, no matter the length of time.
