

HOW THE US COULDN'T FIND THE VIETNAMESE SOLDIERS

Let's go back in time, to 1955.

It's the Vietnam war and they just thought of a way to confuse the USA.

(Graphic: Soldier having a lightbulb moment)

What is it?

They walked backwards.

(Graphic: Soldiers doing the moonwalk)

Kidding. Well, not really.

The soldiers didn't really have shoes to wear after coming out of their tunnels.

*(Graphic: Smart Nonsense mascot with Vietnamese soldiers saying "Let's save that story for another time. wink wink")

And they weren't exactly cheap.

(Graphic: Sarcastic Vietnamese soldiers saying "Thanks Capitalism!")

So, they got crafty and made sandals from old tires.

(Graphic: Soldier raising sandal sole and saying "Voila!")

But that meant they'd leave footprints, riiiiight?

Well, they thought 5 steps ahead! (Or, you know, back!)

They cut the narrow "heel" at the front and the wider "toe" at the back.

And the USA fell for the trap! And this went on for 18 years!

(Graphic: USA Soldiers in a forest, giving up saying "MAKE IT STOP!")