Garfield County leaders react to recent wolf releases January 24, 2025 Colorado, Post Independent

... Garfield County Commissioners on Monday signed a letter calling for the state to immediately stop any additional releases of gray wolves and to “honor provisions to protect against impacts from gray wolf reintroduction...I’ve been against the reintroduction of the wolf from the start. I think it’s very foolish to do that,” Commissioner Mike Samson said…

Colorado Officials Forced To Euthanize Wolf After It Continuously Killed Livestock June 3, 2025 Wide Open Spaces

... This comes after the same animal had to be relocated for previous concerns. The repeat offenses forced officials to euthanize the wolf. It's the first time that officials have euthanized one of the animals since they were reintroduced in the state in 2023...

Colorado Ordered to Cease and Desist Wolf Reintroduction October 29, 2025 Sportsmen's Alliance

...On October 10, 2025, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) Director Brian Nesvik sent a cease and desist letter to Colorado Parks and Wildlife (CPW) telling the agency to immediately end “all efforts related to the capture, transport and/or release of gray wolves not obtained from…the [Northern Rocky Mountains] area.” ... CPW introduced 15 wolves from British Columbia in early 2025…

The Wolves Colorado Wants Are Right There…But Nobody's Giving Them Up November 18, 2025 Montana Outdoor Radio Show

... Colorado can only source wolves from northern Rockies states like Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming, but so far, none of those neighbors have been willing to play ball ... Meanwhile, Colorado’s wolf crew, which is said to consist of 25 or so pups spread across a handful of packs, is hanging in there ...

Colorado has wolves again for the first time in 80 years. Why are they dying? November 24, 2025, Vox

... Ten of the transplanted wolves are already dead, as is one of their offspring. And now, the state is struggling to find new wolves to ship to Colorado for the next phase of reintroduction. Meanwhile, the program has cost millions of dollars more than expected..,