Keywords: Keywords should highlight the novelty of the article, consisting of a minimum of 3 and a maximum of 5 words. Font: Sitka Display, size 10

INTRODUCTION

The introduction should discuss the background, rationale, and urgency of the study in a scientific manner. It should also explain how the research contributes to strengthening existing theories and offers academic significance in the current and future context. Font: Sitka Display, size 12.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

This section should explain the research methods used, such as:

a) Quantitative methods (survey, comparative, correlation, experimental, quasi-experimental)
b) Qualitative methods (ethnography, phenomenology, historical study, case study, critical study, content analysis, etc.)
c) Other methods such as mixed methods, classroom action research, R&D, or prototype design.

It must also include details about the research subjects or participants (informants/respondents), instruments used, data collection tools, sources of data, and data analysis techniques. Font: Sitka Display, size 12.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

This section should comprehensively describe the research findings, which may be presented in the form of tables, charts, images, narratives, or other visualizations to facilitate reader understanding. Font: Garamond, size 12.

After presenting the results, the author must discuss the findings scientifically. This includes interpreting results, analyzing their impact, determining whether they answer the research objectives, and linking findings with relevant theories, expert opinions, and previous studies. Font: Sitka Display, size 12.

CONCLUSION

The conclusion should summarize the main findings in relation to the research problem. It may also include recommendations for future studies or practical implications derived from the results. Font: Book Antiqua, size 12.

REFERENCES

All cited references must be properly listed following the APA Style and managed using a reference management tool (e.g., Mendeley).
The Editorial Team of El-Kahfi: Journal of Islamic Economics reminds all authors that at least
