

A Call for Urgent Action: Prioritize Women's, Children's and Adolescents' health

Dear [Full name of political leader],

As we approach the critical deadline of the 2030 SDGs Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), we urge you to prioritize healthcare as a fundamental human right for women, children, and adolescents. 46 countries are failing to meet the SDGs for maternal mortality, and 59 countries are falling short in reducing under-5 child mortality. This demands urgent, high-level political action.

The realization of these goals hinges on your commitment to taking immediate action on the following three critical areas:

- Invest: Prioritize increased investments into women, children, and adolescent health to improve health outcomes, reduce mortality rates, and strengthen healthcare systems.
- Access: Expand equitable access to quality health services and sexual and reproductive health rights commodities such as trained personnel.
- Rights: Protect the health, sexual reproductive rights of women, and bodily autonomy of women, children, and adolescents.

By taking these steps, we can move closer to a future where women, children, and adolescents can live healthy and fulfilling lives, recognizing their crucial role in social and economic development.

We urge you to prioritize healthcare in your policy decisions and work with other leaders to create a healthier and more equitable world.

Sincerely,
