

Senior Spotlight: Nick Gonzalez

As a senior in high school, you know the school like the back of your hand. You know which teacher will give you a pass if you are late to a class or even how to get inside the school without having to tap-in. As I became older and passed from grade to grade my perspective changed on school.

Advice I would give to incoming freshmen would be to be involved in as many after school activities as possible whether it's clubs or sports. As a senior I regret not joining some sports or clubs. At the same time, don't bombard yourself with classes because you then don't get to experience times with your friends doing fun things around town.

As a graduating senior I will definitely miss my family that I made with the soccer team. Soccer in high school is a lot different than in college. In high school, you are most likely versing people that play as a second sport. Playing in front of your school and celebrating in front of them is definitely one of my favorite memories and moments I'm going to miss a lot.

People have told me that graduating hasn't hit them yet. I think it's different for many people. For some it may finally come on the day of graduation. As my final piece of reflection for my 4 years of high school, I would like to end it with a quote that stuck with me, "Life moves pretty fast. If you don't stop and look around once in a while, you could miss it." by Ferris Bueller. Appreciate what you have because you never know when it will be gone.
