Abstract

A well-prepared abstract enables the reader to identify the basic content of a document quickly and accurately, to determine its relevance to their interests, and thus to decide whether to read the document in its entirety. The Abstract should be informative and completely self-explanatory, provide a clear statement of the problem, the proposed approach or solution, and point out major findings and conclusions. The Abstract should be 200 to 250 words in length. The abstract should be written in the past tense. Standard nomenclature should be used and abbreviations should be avoided. No literature should be cited. The keyword list provides the opportunity to add keywords, used by the indexing and abstracting services, in addition to those already present in the title. Judicious use of keywords may increase the ease with which interested parties can locate our article.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Literature review surveys books, scholarly articles, and any other sources relevant to a particular issue, area of research, or theory, and by so doing, provides a description, summary, and critical evaluation of these works in relation to the research problem being investigated.

Summary of previous investigations lead to understanding the state of current research, its relevance, and provides an overall understanding of the literature's contribution to scholarship.

METHODS

The methodology should be sufficiently described and use a suitable methodology. It contains the research procedures, sampling and data collection techniques, and data analysis methods which are presented briefly and concisely and written in Times New Roman font, 12-pt size, with regular type.

RESULT AND DISCUSSION

This segment presents the analysis of the related results, theories, and hypotheses (if any) based on the author's reasoning. Data analysis and discussion should be presented briefly and clearly and not be dominated by the presentation of tables. The discussion includes the presentation and interpretation of results that are conveyed logically and are linked to relevant reference sources.

The figures should be numbered according to the order in which they are presented (e.g. Figure 1. etc.). The source, number and title of the figure are written below the figure. The figure title is written in Times New Roman font, 12-pt size, with bold type, and centered. While the figure source is written in Times New Roman, 12-pt, with italic type, and centered. Figure quality must be good, proportional size and high resolution. Figures are presented in an editable format, not an image or cropped from other sources or raw output of software.

The discussion presents the findings or analysis of research results by comparing with the theory or previous relevant research, or with reality in the field. The discussion also includes the author's views related to the research findings. The tables, figures, and charts presented should not be the rough output but in the processed and brief summary written in Times New Roman font, 12-pt size, with regular type.

CONCLUSION

Restate the topic. The author should briefly restate the topic as well as explaining why it is important. Restate the thesis. Briefly summarise the main points. Add the points up. Make a call to action when appropriate. Answer the “so what” question.
