

The new Allsop Academy

In the Allsop Academy, there were changes in the recent years. Now it is one of the best. With the new headteacher, Michael Wilson, the school changed a lot. The buildings were painted in blue and yellow and the discipline improved a lot.

To improve the discipline the headteacher changed the standard methods to the traditional ways of teaching. Now the students have to make lines to wait for the teacher before they enter to the classroom. The uniform is red and grey. If you bring wrong uniform or your hair is too long or too short the teacher sends you home. Also, the students can't go to fast-food shops for lunch. If you don't bring your homework you stay in the school after classes.

In my opinion, with the new headteacher the school has made many changes, but some of the rules are too strict, especially the one about the food.