

Nicki Minaj has been arrested yet again, and this time it's more serious than ever!

The "Bang Bang" singer found herself in serious trouble as she tried to jet off from Amsterdam to Manchester for a concert. Just as this Starships singer was leaving on May 25th, she was detained at Amsterdam Airport Schiphol.

The "Anaconda" rapper was detained and arrested because she was allegedly exporting soft drugs, or this is what the airport security suspected.

And then as expected, her video went viral, where we saw Nicki in a tête-à-tête with an Amsterdam police officer. She is seen demanding the officer to tell her the reason she was being arrested.

This Queen of Rap was then told straight to her face that she was being arrested because she was exporting illegal drugs.

As always, this drama reached social media.

Nicki had been vocal on social media, accusing the airport officials of trying to sabotage her tour. She claimed her luggage was taken away, and when she inquired, she was told it was already on the plane, which she doubted.

Nicki suggested this was a tactic to plant something in her luggage.

This rap queen is in the middle of her Pink Friday 2 World Tour, and Manchester was supposed to be her next stop.

There is a video of her hashing it out with an airport official about wanting to open her bags, and later, Nicki revealed the news that the security found weed in her bag!

Interestingly, Nicki pointed out that marijuana is legal in Amsterdam.

Even though our 12-time Grammy nominee was eventually released, she had her own theories about the whole ordeal.

She believes it was orchestrated by those who wanted to mess with her tour, her schedule, and her finances.

She recounted how she had had to fire management personnel after discovering they had been overcharging her for jet services to the tune of 30-50K and pocketing the extra cash. She even fired a manager who was allegedly in on this scheme.

Nicki is not shy about calling out those she feels are trying to undermine her success. She expressed her frustration that this seems to be a part of a larger attempt to sabotage her tour because it has been very successful, and certain people cannot profit from it anymore.

Even fans were suspicious of the whole event. A fan of this Barbie World singer pointed out that the timing of these incidents seemed particularly suspicious, given they occurred right after the announcement of the second leg of her U.S. tour.

According to fan theories, the arrest was made just to throw her off.

Other than this recent spat with airport officials, this hot-headed rapper is no stranger to public fights and arrests.

Way back in 2003, she ended up in jail for having a weapon she planned to use. And do you know who revealed this info? The badass rapper herself!

Years later in 2021, she shocked everyone by posting her old mugshots from when she was 20. Some fans clapped for her honesty, finding it brave that she shared such a tough part of her life. Others were left scratching their heads, puzzled over why she would flaunt those rough times as something to be proud of.

Maybe she faced no serious consequences back then, but she is definitely facing them now. Her highly anticipated concert in Amsterdam has been canceled and the tickets have been refunded.

Do you think her arrest was legit or it was a ruse? Share your opinions with us in the comments below!

Make sure to like, share, and subscribe for more juicy updates!

Goodbye for now!