

Krr'Tankhen

tan → Hope khien → no, none, without,... krr → basic articles (The,...)

Krr'tankhen, which name loosely translates to "The Hopeless", are a race of an insectoid hive mind commonly believed to be created, like the Zykorians, by the Solaran cult. These were created first tho as a kind of prototype to test the limits of gene-manipulation.

Instances differ in appearance and physical attributes depending on which class they were born in. Although all of them have in common that they are plated with blue velvet coloured chitin plates and posses one eye on their facial plate.

The following are some, but not all, of the most commonly found classes of Krr'Tankhen.

The Queen:

... is the most important class of the cluster and only has one (1) instance living at a time per cluster. These creatures resemble an atlas moth, but when in close comparison, it is visible that the wings are made out of overlapping chitin plates following a fibonacci pattern in their scale. For example: 1st plate 1.5 m, 2nd plate 1.5 m, 3rd plate 3 m, 4th plate 4.5 m,

Her abdomen extends downwards to the top of the column in the center of the queen's quarters and links the whole hive together.

The queen's total size is, without the extended abdomen, sixty (60) meters long and ninety (90) meters wide.

The Matriarchs:

... are a group of seven (7) look-a-likes, but all having a different set of horns indicating their primary focus. These instances are the only males in the cluster and share anatomy with the common earth mantis. These instances stand up to thirty (30) meters high and forty-five (45) meters in length.

I will add the others soon.

The origin planet of these creatures is unknown, but the origin planet inside the milky way is located in the Solar system Eidthenheit on the planet Zuul. This System is located at Dotat Caros Delta 35° RW 130° SW.

The Planet now is completely transformed into a hive.